'CHANCE TO CLEAR MY NAME'

Davis Welcomes Laying of Charges

A writ detailing charges of theft and fraud was served on former transport minister Jack Davis this morning after he had been kept hanging for nearly a month wondering where he stood with the law.

DAVIS

At a press conference Friday Davis said he was glad the charges were finally being laid. "This way I can really clear my name, clear it without any hint of favor, political or otherwise."

Davis says he will fight the charges and will remain in the House as an MLA during the court proceedings in Vancouver.

The charges carry a maximum penalty of 10 years in prison.

Davis is the second member of a B.C. government to be charged while in office. Robert Sommers, former Social Credit lands and forests minister, was found guilty in 1958 of accepting bribes and was sentenced to five years in prison.

Davis was dismissed from the Cabinet April 3 when Premier Bill Bennett told the legislature about the RCMP investigation into Davis' use of airline tickets.

Davis said the charge of theft over $200 and fraud, as earlier indicated, involves his practice of changing first-class airline tickets to economy. About $900 in refunds is involved.

The precise date for his first court appearance is not known, but it has to be within seven days of the issuing of the writ.

Davis, 61, said both he and his Vancouver lawyer, Allen McEachern, are convinced he will be cleared of the charges.

"My conscience is clear. I have done no wrong. I haven't short-changed anyone, least of all the government."

He said this will be proved in the courts.

Davis said there is no question of financial gain involved because he neither asked for, nor received, refunds for other expenses he could have charged to the government.

"On balance I never owed the government anything. It owed me money instead."

Davis made it clear the delay in getting the issue into the courts is wearying to him.

"My reputation is at stake. My long and honorable career of 25 years in the public service of Canada is being dragged in the mud. My family and my friends are distressed.

MOSCOW (AP) — The pilot and navigator of a downed South Korean jetliner left the Soviet Union today after the official news agency Tass said they admitted having disobeyed Russian pilots' orders to land when their Boeing 707 violated Soviet airspace.

A U.S. embassy spokesman confirmed that pilot Kim Chang-kyu and navigator Lee Kun-shik had departed from Leningrad aboard a Scandinavian Air Systems flight to Copenhagen via Stockholm.

Inflation Of 9% For U.S.?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Inflation in the U.S. could climb to more than nine per cent this year, the labor department said Friday.

The anouncement followed the publication of figures showing a 0.8 per cent increase in consumer prices during March.

Economic observers say the latest figures likely will provide new pressure for the government to step up its anti-inflation campaign.

Inflation already is running well above the six to seven per cent previously forecast for 1978.

Rex Granum, deputy White House press secretary, said the latest figures were disappointing, but reaffirmed the administration's belief that price increases would slow later in the year.

Steep price rises in the first two months prompted President Carter earlier this month to renew his anti-inflation campaign, with an appeal for voluntary co-operation from business and labor to hold down wage and price increases.

More Firms to Close Labor's Ryan Warns

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Closure of McDonald's bakery, which cost Victoria 62 jobs, may be only the start of a series of industry losses for the district, industrial commission chairman Larry Ryan said today.

"We have received reports that several more companies, operating as branch plants, may soon close here."

Ryan said companies are operating on what he called "the iron law of centralization," consolidating their manufacturing in a central location.

Closure of McDonald's to consolidate in a Langley bakery was an example of this, as was the loss of the Bapco paint plant and the Quadra Street winery.

The commission is checking on reports other companies are planning to close Victoria branches, he said.

Ryan, a city alderman and secretary of the Victoria Labor Council, said local unions must take a firm stand this year to protect workers in the event of further closures.

Severance pay clauses are not enough, he said.

Companies should be required to give adequate notice and should be made to justify their closure by opening their books.

"Closing a plant represents a serious loss to the city and it would be in the public interest to have the books opened to see if the closure is justified."

In addition, there must be clauses in contracts guaranteeing workers jobs elsewhere in the company in the event a plant is closed.

"We in the labor movement have been too trusting. Management tends to laugh it off, to say: How ridiculous can you get? We've been here for 25 years, we're not going to close . . . that sort of thing."

Now it is clear there must be more protection because more closures are likely as companies consolidate their activities, Ryan said.

Neither the industrial commission nor labor can help to save a plant unless there is advance notification of a planned closure, he added.

McGavins, which owns McDonald's, did not notify the industrial commission and gave only minimal notice to its employees, Ryan said.

"The first thing we (in the industrial commission) knew about the McDonald's closure was when we read about it in the newspaper."

Ryan said the industrial commission was working hard with other companies in an effort to head off any future closures but it might prove difficult because of the economic difficulties associated with branch plant operations.

Clocks Ahead Tonight

Daylight saving time arrives at 2 a.m. Sunday and at that time clocks in B.C. will be advanced by one hour. But it's far more practical to do this before bedding down for the night.

Pacific Standard Time returns to the province at 2 a.m. Oct. 29.

Once a controversial issue, daylight saving came to Victoria first in 1918, the final year of the First World War, in order to save electricity for war munitions.

INDIANS END BLOCKADE

CRANBROOK (CP) — The St. Mary's Indian band Friday ended its blockade of a CP Rail line which cuts through reserve land near here after the company agreed to discuss the Indians' complaints.

The band seeks damages from CP Rail because it says 80 to 90 acres of land have been lost through erosion.

Liquor Up On Monday

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Liquor Distribution Branch announced Friday that the price of beer and hard liquor in British Columbia is going up.

The branch said in a news release that the price of a case of beer will increase 19 cents Monday, while the price of hard liquor and imported beer will increase June 1.

The price to the consumer for draft beer will not change since the increase will amount to less than one cent a glass and will be absorbed with the move to smaller capacity metric glasses, the branch said.

Price increases of 30 to 40 cents a bottle on domestic spirits, five to 10 cents a bottle on imported spirits, excluding scotch, and 20 to 45 cents a case for imported beer, will take place June 1.

Liqueurs will cost 70 to 85 cents more a bottle.

The price of a bottle of scotch will increase as much as 75 cents June 1. The branch said five to 10 cents of the increase is government markup, while the rest is the result of higher prices from the suppliers.

The branch said there will be no price increases for wines and low alcohol beer, reflecting the government's policy of encouraging the consumption of lower alcohol products.

The new prices are the first government markup on liquor since July, 1975, the branch said. Any increases since that time have been the result of higher costs from suppliers, higher shipping costs, or have reflected changes in the value of currencies.

Door Closed To Save Life

VANCOUVER (CP) — A decision to close the door on a burning room containing three elderly women could have been avoided if politicians enforced tighter present-day fire safety systems on older buildings, Coroner Glen McDonald said Friday.

McDonald agreed with fire marshals who attended at the fire that rest home owner Anna Jaworsky was correct under the circumstances in shutting the door of the room where the fire started, leaving the three victims inside.

He made comments during the inquest into the deaths of Ann Craig Walker, 87; Neltje Monasch, 92, and Hilda Kate Hogarth, 84, who died as the result of an early-morning blaze April 7 in the White Gates rest home where they were residents.

Their deaths were ruled unnatural and accidental by the six-member jury who recommended that the rest home be required to upgrade its fire safety mechanisms.

Two heat sensors on the second floor, triggered to sound when temperatures reached 57 degrees celsius, were not set off by the blaze which was confined to a single 4.5-metre square bedroom on the main floor.

Inhalation of smoke and hot gases, plus burns, caused the deaths of Walker and Monasch who were dead on arrival at hospital. Hogarth died 11 hours later of smoke inhalation and burns.

Asked by McDonald what would have happened had the door been left open, Inspector J. W. Griswold said "there would have been a complete catastrophe," because the fire would have quickly spread, endangering 15 other elderly residents who escaped.

"Perhaps if we had some gutsy regulations from our politicians, Mrs. Jaworsky would not have been placed in the position of deciding whether to close the door," said McDonald.

"I would sincerely hope that the provincial fire marshal and city fire warden get together and say to victoria 'make some laws,' " McDonald said. "Life is really in the hands of the politicians, not the bureaucrats.

"Why the city fathers can't make a law retroactive (to encompass older buildings) in order to save lives, I don't know . . . we can't wait for another committee to be struck. Somebody has got to take charge."

The jury further recommended that the kind of restraining jackets worn by the elderly women to prevent them from falling out of their

Trade Surplus Soars in 1978

OTTAWA (CP) — The trade surplus in goods hit $1.412 billion in the first three months of 1978, nearly double that of the same period a year ago, Statistics Canada reported Friday.

The substantial improvement came as a record $4.361 billion worth of goods was sold in March on a balance-of-payments basis, running up a surplus for the month of $840 million.

In the first three months of 1977, the trade surplus was $796 million. In the final quarter it was $1.154 billion.

Meanwhile, the finance department's economic review for 1977 says wage increases will have to be held down if industry is to benefit from recent gains in international competitiveness arising from devaluation of the dollar.

The 239-page review, released Friday, says that last year there was a substantial improvement in Canada's position compared with all its major trading partners.

"All the improvement, however, came from the depreciation of the Canadian dollar and appreciation of other major currencies vis-a-vis the U.S. dollar," the review says.

Victoria a Distant Second In Hotel Luxury

When it comes to luxurious hotel or motel accommodations in B.C. Victoria rates second only to Vancouver — but we're a long way from being a challenger.

According to the 1978 TourBook released recently by the Canadian Automobile Association no Victoria hotels, not even the Empress, managed to rate five diamonds, the highest award given out by the CAA.

And only four Victoria hotels managed four diamonds.

Four Vancouver hotels got the five-diamond award, which were presented by Travel Minister Grace McCarthy last Friday, and 10 rated four diamonds.

Throughout the province seven other communities had one hotel apiece that got four diamonds, but none managed to achieve the top five-diamond award.

The TourBook explains that one or more diamonds indicate that the establishment meets or exceeds basic American Automobile Association and CAA requirements.

The hotels and motels are all personally inspected by trained association officials.

Merely getting a listing in the book is an accomplishment.

"For every establishment selected to be listed in the TourBook, four others were inspected and found to be lacking in some important consideration," explain the editors.

Four diamonds mean "Exceptional; significantly exceeds AAA/CAA requirements in most physical and operational categories. Offers luxurious accomodations, as well as extra amenities. The management and staff, the housekeeping and maintenance rank well above average."

Winning that rating in Victoria were The Empress, the Harbor Towers Motor Hotel, the Oak Bay Beach Hotel and the Chateau Victoria.

Five diamonds (signifying the establishment is renowned, with exceptional services and atmosphere went to: The Bayshore Inn, Four Seasons Hotel, Hotel Vancouver and the Hyatt Regency, all of which are in Vancouver.

Only twelve hotels across Canada managed to attain such high ratings.

The 10 four-diamond hotels in Vancouver are: Hotel Georgia; Holiday Inn-City Centre; 'The Inn' at Denman Place; Sheraton-Landmark Hotel; Sheraton Plaza 500 Hotel; Sheraton Villa Inn; Airport Hyatt House; Delta Hotels Vancouver Airport Inn; Richmond Flag Inn, and the Vernon Lodge Hotel.

In the rest of B.C. only seven communities had four-diamond establishments, including the Delta Hotels Discovery Inn, at Campbell River, and the Village Green Inn, at Duncan.

The Harrison Hotel, at Harrison Hot Springs, the Delta Hotels Canadian Inn (Kamloops), Capri Hotel (Kelowna), Delta's Inn of the North (Prince George) and the Crest Motor Hotel (Prince Rupert) were the others named.

Bill Updates RCMP Discipline

OTTAWA (CP) — RCMP discipline would be modernized and opened to outside scrutiny by a bill introduced in the Commons Friday by Solicitor-General Jean-Jacques Blais.

The bill to amend the Royal Canadian Mounted Police Act also would create a three-man external review committee to handle public grievances about treatment by the RCMP.

The committee would make recommendations to the RCMP commissioner on some grievances, serious discipline cases and orders for demotion and discharge, although the commissioner would retain the right to make the final decision in any case.

The bill incorporates the major recommendations of the 1976 Marin inquiry into RCMP discipline and handling of public complaints, which said the system of allowing the force to investigate public complaints against itself created an air of suspicion.

The government has given no indication whether this is a priority piece of legislation which it would want passed before calling a general election.

The proposed amendments answer many of the Marin commission's criticisms of the force's out-dated para-military system of discipline, under which a member of the force can be imprisoned for up to a year for committing a major service offence.

The new bill accepts the concept "that discipline should be remedial or corrective in nature rather than punitive," Blais said in a press release Friday.

The list of major service offences contained in the present act would be revoked and replaced by more modern standards of conduct. An RCMP member would no longer be subject to imprisonment on the orders of the commissioner.

Officers would have greater discretion in handling minor infractions of the standards of conduct. Officers would have the option of counselling members, recommending that they seek professional counselling or giving them a warning before taking more formal disciplinary action.

Many RCMP members who testified before the five-man Marin inquiry said the force's punishment-oriented discipline system sometimes worsens personal problems, such as alcoholism.

BOOKING TIME REDUCED

OTTAWA (CP) — The cut-off date to reserve a seat on a domestic advanced booking charter (ABC) flight until June 30 has been dropped to 30 days from 45 days before the flight date, the Canadian transport commission announced Friday.

The change was requested by airlines, which said they did not have enough time to market the new domestic ABC flights.

The 45-day booking requirement will be re-instituted July 1.

ABCs have been popular on trans-Atlantic flights for a number of years because of their low prices, but were banned on the domestic market until last December.

'REAL INDIAN NATION'

OTTAWA (CP) — Yukon Indians are proposing a land claim settlement in which an Indian government would have exclusive authority over all fish, game and forest resources in the territory, The Canadian Press learned Friday.

The Indian government, with its own parliament, also would have total control over services to Indians, including education, health, welfare, local government, justice, housing and taxation.

It would be separate from the Yukon territorial government and would have many of the powers that government now holds. Basically, it would be an Indian nation within Confederation.

The proposals are included in a claim's package being discussed at a Council for Yukon Indians (CYI) assembly in Whitehorse this week. The CYI, pending assembly approval, expects to present the package to the federal government next week.

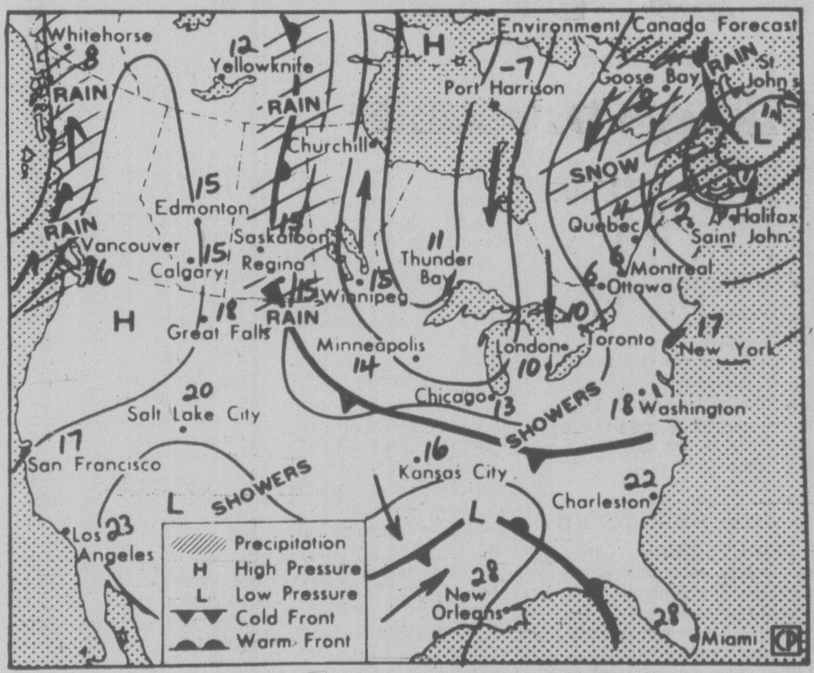

Map valid until noon Sunday

Although cloud covered much of the province overnight, sizeable breaks have started appearing across western B.C. as a ridge of high pressure along the coast continues edging inland. Further west a Pacific disturbance is approaching the Charlottes. This system will result in rain on the north coast today but weaken as it moves onto the south coast leaving most shower activity behind on the outer coast. Continued improvement is expected through the eastern interior as the ridge becomes established over southeastern B.C. by Sunday.

Repudiate Vogel, Urges Macdonald

Former attorney-general Alex Macdonald Friday urged Attorney-General Garde Gardom to repudiate statements attributed to his deputy that people in B.C. do not mind illegal activity by the RCMP.

Deputy Attorney-General Richard Vogel had been quoted as saying such an attitude is becoming a way of life in B.C. and he wanted to change that by making apparently unlawful RCMP activity lawful.

Macdonald told the legislature that such an attitude is dangerous.

"The words seem to suggest that certain sections in our society should be exempt from the rule of law. Yet if we condone illegal activities and law-breaking by one group, we condone it for all, so we undermine the total rule of law," Macdonald said.

"So I suggest that it is a matter of extreme urgency and importance that the attorney-general repudiate such sentiments and make sure that they are not simply passed off as the right of somebody to speak freely on this kind of a subject.

"They must be repudiated, and they cannot be allowed to seem to be eminating from that department."

Gardom later said he wouldn't reprimand Vogel even though he doesn't necessarily agree with the statements. He said Vogel can say what he likes on the issue.

"I think the public is concerned about illegality no matter what area it comes from."

Gardom told reporters he does not believe that British Columbians are prepared to tolerate illegal activities whatsoever "and neither am I."

Gardom said that he has called for a report on testimony last week at the federal government inquiry into RCMP activities which disclosed that since 1970 the RCMP had performed more than 400 break-ins without warrants in B.C.

Gardom said his officials had received the transcripts Thursday and were studying them. He said he believes that the incidents involved narcotics, organized crime and the more serious crimes such as homicides.

The attorney-general reiterated that police must be accountable for their actions.

He refused to say if any members of the force would be prosecuted for their illegal activities.

. . .Sticking Right to Law, Police Claim

VANCOUVER (CP) — Spokesmen for municipal police forces in British Columbia say they are adhering strictly to legal process to remain above reproach.

Policemen interviewed recently in 13 municipalities said illegal break-ins are not condoned, despite increased restrictions on the availability of search warrants.

Spokesmen said legal process has never been more closely followed than at present, partly because of publicity about RCMP break-ins and also due to a recent incident in Delta where three policemen were charged with common assault by a resident who complained the officers entered his house without a warrant.

Only one spokesman, Deputy Chief Barrett Gunn of New Westminster police, said that in the past his officers had entered premises without warrants.

He said only hotels, not private homes, were entered, usually in connection with vice investigations. He said officers were becoming more aware of proper lawful procedure.

Some officers have found alternative means to obtain information they want, even if they haven't a search warrant, Staff Sergeant Ron Burgess of New Westminster city police said.

He said that if a homeowner allows police to enter his premises, officers may record serial numbers of items they believe might be stolen.

"If you're satisfied you've got stolen goods on your hands, the best way is to sit tight, holler for help and wait for your buddy to get a search warrant," Burgess said.

"If you start sticking your neck out (search without a warrant), you stand to get it chopped...or sometimes you don't," he said.

Deputy Chief Bob Brolly of West Vancouver said if the officer is operating on a hunch, a warrant is out of the question.

"It gets pretty frustrating...we've probably lost many (criminals) as a result. But that's the game—you win some, you lose some," he said.

Indians Lose Tax Claim

VANCOUVER (CP) — Justice J. A. Macdonald ruled Friday that electrical power which native Indians living on reservations buy from British Columbia Hydro is subject to provincial sales tax.

Justice Macdonald said that electricity is personal property but it is not the type of personal property for which the federal Indian Act gives reserve Indians exemption from property taxation.

Lillian Brown, a Haida elder from Skidegate had launched a B.C. Supreme Court action on her own behalf and behalf of all other Indians who buy Hydro power and are charged provincial sales tax on it, asking that all taxes paid be returned.

Lawyers for the Indians claimed that the electricity became the personal property of the Indians from the moment it came through the wires into their homes.

Justice Macdonald said although the Indian Act is a paternalistic statute making many special provisions for Indians "it is clear that Parliament has not gone so far as to say that an Indian residing on a reserve is not subject to any tax or duty."

Guardians of Liberty

If there is anything more damaging to the tenuous fabric of Canadian civil liberties than the disclosure this week that the Royal Canadian Mounted Police carried out hundreds of illegal break-ins in the 1970s, it is the calm, almost nonchalant manner in which the news was greeted by the politicians and senior civil servants who are responsible for the force in Parliament and the provincial legislature.

What does Solicitor-General Jean-Jacques Blais think of the force's admission of more than 400 "surreptitious entry intelligence probes," without the blessing of search warrants, in B.C. between 1972 and 1976?

"I don't think that whether I'm appalled or shocked by it is really relevant because it hasn't taken place since prior to my appointment and indeed the question of any judgment on the behavior is a question for the McDonald inquiry."

In other words, it's not my job, I wasn't solicitor-general then and shuffle it off to the royal commission, which won't report for another year or two at least.

He plans no disciplinary action against RCMP officials who made such break-ins a deliberate policy of the force, who authorized illegal mail openings and various agent provocateur tactics — all in the holy name of national security, of course — for several years early in the decade.

He does not believe "individuals' (in the force) reputations have been tarnished" by the revelations of shabby and illegal actions. All Blais is concerned with is "to ensure that the RCMP at the present time is operating within confines of the law and that the people who are in place are responsible individuals."

But many of the same individuals who approved, authorized, encouraged these illegal acts are still in positions of authority — unchallenged, undisciplined. When he was postmaster-general (remember, only a few months ago), they lied to Blais about illegal mail openings; just as easily it could happen again. The coverup never really stopped. How can Blais say it is not continuing at this very moment?

Attorney-General Garde Gardom of British Columbia is Blais' spiritual brother in this affair. He, too, manages to mask any indignation or outrage he may feel about the hundreds of illegal break-ins, bending over backwards not to offend the Mounties. He wasn't particularly surprised, he admits.

An inquiry into the matter? Why, heavens no! "I'm just asking for a full report. I don't think there is any need for an inquiry." Who could suggest such a trivial thing as finding out (worse yet, telling the public who pay the RCMP's and the attorney-general's salaries) why the RCMP, with the nefarious writs of assistance at their disposal, with search warrants available upon application to a judge, preferred to break into British Columbians' homes and steal evidence? Perish the thought.

Deputy attorney-general Dick Vogel's comments, however, are the most incredible of all. He said (in an interview with The Globe and Mail) that British Columbia just loves the idea of Mounties going around breaking and entering at will on fishing expeditions for evidence of wrongdoing.

The police found the break-ins were necessary, so "we have to make them lawful, that is all. We do have confidence in our police force, clearly. And clearly, as far as my reading is concerned, the community will tolerate unlawful activity in the police force."

A new age of justice dawns — forget the criminal code of Canada, legal precedents, English common law. Whatever happens to be "tolerated" at the moment is okay. The vigilante execution of child molesters is probably "tolerated" by the majority of Canadians, as too the public hanging of common murderers is "tolerated" by many. Long live situational ethics.

The country is in good hands. Don't trouble your little minds about RCMP wrongdoings. All's well. National security. Maintiens le droit. Go back to sleep. Zzzzz . . .

FRED CLEVERLEY

A Power Grid for the West

WINNIPEG — A four-province western Canada energy swap, if accomplished, could provide a means for Alberta to spin out its oil and coal reserves and give Manitoba an energy sales potential as significant for the province as the discovery of North Sea oil was to Britain.

The exchange is the subject of a study by representatives of Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columia which was announced at the conclusion of the recent western premiers' conference at Yorkton, Sask.

One rather ironic aspect of the scheme is that it would probably have never been proposed if Manitoba had not worked itself into a staggering financial bind in its power developments so far. With only two-fifths of the development of the Nelson River complete, more than half Manitoba's long-term debt is already power related.

And although power rates in Manitoba have doubled in the last four years, a full $500 million of the borrowings for power development have yet to be reflected in power rates, and are being carried by borrowing additional money to pay the interest.

No Markets

Also, because projected demands have not been realized, Manitoba is sitting with a 1,200-megawatt power station about to come on line and nowhere to sell the electricity.

As Manitoba's new minister of finance, Donald Craik, said in his budget speech: "This scenario leads only to one conclusion. Either we develop markets through in-province consumption or we develop export markets. If we do neither in the near future, even 'schoolboy arithmetic' spells out the consequences for the Hydro ratepayer."

Craik's reference to "schoolboy arithmetic" adds emphasis to the continuing controversy over power development policies that exists between the new administration and the New Democratic government it replaced last October. The Conservatives, who are now in power, have maintained that the previous government's policies resulted in wasting hundreds of millions of dollars. Since taking office, they have appointed a commission of inquiry.

"Schoolboy arithmetic" was the phrase used by the former chairman of Manitoba Hydro, David Cass-Beggs, to describe the warnings voiced by former Liberal premier Douglas Campbell, who told then-premier Ed Schreyer his development would result in unnecessary expenditures. As the bills mounted, the phrase has been repeated many times.

When the government changed, the new administration found the Hydro debt at $1.8 billion and faced the prospect of annual power rate increases of between 20 and 40 per cent just to retire it, with no further development.

When the Conservative administration headed by Duff Roblin began the Nelson River development in 1966, the plan was to harness the river ahead of Manitoba's own needs, and sell the surplus to the United States during the summer months to help pay the development costs.

TRANSMISSION TOWER
. . . grid for western Canada

Now that the Conservatives are back in power, it is clear they see their only way out is to sell the power. The new factor in the proposed solution is the suggested sale to Alberta. On the surface, it would appear counterproductive to attempt to sell power to an area that has the same peak demands as the existing market, rather than attempting to sell to an area, such as the U.S., where the peak occurs in July and August to run air conditioning and when Manitoba has surplus water dropping over spillways into the ocean.

But the reasoning behind the study seems to be that if Alberta agrees to get its power from Manitoba, from a renewable resource, it is in the position to supply development capital to be repaid through future power sales.

Manitoba has not abandoned the original plan to sell power to the south during the summer. But if the winter peak can be increased, and justified by sales to Alberta, then Manitoba will have additional generating capacity to make bigger summer sales.

The economics of power sales are rather staggering. Last November, during a time when Manitoba was exporting three-quarters of the output of a single plant, it was earning money at the rate of $10,000 an hour, for a daily sale of more than $168,000. The daily output of one station on the Nelson River is worth more than $250,000.

And the money is almost all profit, since there is no fuel to buy, and the lifespan of hydro plants runs in excess of 90 years.

If the plants were paid for out of winter sales, the summer revenue could be used to reduce the long-term debt, and Manitoba could maintain its present power rates.

However, the western power grid will not be easily accomplished. The economics will have to provide an advantage to Alberta when weighed against the consumption of its own form of energy.

Technical Problems

Then, as has been pointed out, there are technical problems to be overcome. Alberta and British Columbia are linked to the western U.S. grid, which is out of phase with the remainder of the continent. So far the Americans have been unable to get the systems into phase.

But Manitoba has pioneered the long distance transmission of direct current electricity in North Ameria. The present output of the Nelson plants, which represents more than two-thirds of provincial requirements, is piped down one of the longest DC lines in the world, a 535-mile stretch that links Kettle Rapids in the north with Winnipeg in the south. At Winnipeg, the DC current is changed back into the alternating current required by the consumers.

A DC line to Alberta would overcome difficulties presented by the phasing of alternating current systems. Massive amounts of electricity could be dumped into Alberta on a DC line, and converted back, in phase with that area.

If the grid can be constructed, the long term benefits should be a delight to a have-not province such as Manitoba. Eventually, Alberta's oil wells and coal fields will be exhausted. But no one has yet suggested that the rivers will stop flowing.

EDITOR'S NOTEBOOK

Let the Voters Choose: It Doesn't Always Work

With so much interest these days in reform of the Canadian governmental system, it is no wonder that academics, politicians and citizens alike are exploring the different ways that things are done in other western democracies. One of the ideas that has captured the fancy of a number of Canadians is the U.S. system of citizen-originated referenda, initiatives and recalls, a system which, it is alleged, allows the citizens themselves to have some say in matters of government between elections.

Put simply, the U.S. system allows the voters to make some binding legislative decisions on matters about which they feel strongly. The details vary from state to state, but the devices usually allow citizens to challenge legislation that is already enacted, initiate new legislation or oust legislators or municipal officials in mid-term.

Citizens who wish to organize a referendum begin by organizing a petition asking that it be put on the ballot at the next election. If they get the required number of signatures, normally between five and 10 per cent of the electorate, the matter is put to a vote on election day.

If 50 per cent plus one of the voters chooses to overturn a law duly passed by the legislature, the law dies; if a majority votes in favor of a new law, it comes into effect; if the majority votes against an incumbent legislator, he is thrown out in mid-term and a byelection is held.

On the surface there is something quite appealing about the procedure. It gives citizens direct input into their government; it prevents the existence of a "four-year elected dictatorship" which governments in Canada become all too often. People can say what they want, rather than depend on the whims of politicians.

However, a cursory examination of the system during a recent visit to the U.S. has convinced me that the system has at least as many weaknesses as it has strengths. Indiscriminate use of referenda can — and does — bring the traditional system of government to a painful, wrenching halt. A couple of examples may make clearer the problems referenda can cause:

In some parts of southern California, a citizens' initiative led to a strict new property tax bill being passed, which severely limits the allowable increase in property taxes each year and also puts a ceiling on the total mill rate. The measure passed in referendum quite easily; after all, it's the rare citizen who won't vote for a measure to keep his taxes down.

But what the bill didn't do was explain to frustrated elected and appointed municipal officials just how they were supposed to make the bill work. Many communities are now faced with serious cutbacks in such municipal services as police and fire protection because the tax bill forces such a large reduction in municipal spending.

So what are the citizens doing now? Why, organizing referenda to pass laws that would forbid cutbacks in certain municipal services.

The situation is even more serious in one city in the midwest where a citizen-originated referendum resulted in a drastic cutback in the school board budget. The cutback was so large that earlier this month the school district simply ran out of money; there was nothing left even to pay the teachers' salaries with.

The board could see no choice but to close the schools, but the citizens — the same citizens who had voted the budget cutbacks — applied for and received a court order forbidding the closure on grounds that every American child has a right to education. The elected trustees are still looking for a way out of this ridiculous dilemma.

What these examples appear to show is that the referendum system often does not work well because the citizens do not have to take much responsibility for their votes. They vote for something, but they don't have to implement it. If a new law is unworkable, that remains the problem of the elected officials — who still can be thrown out at the next election, or even before if their decisions on how to implement the idea are so unpalatable as to cause a recall.

Moreover, in today's complex society, it is difficult to find a matter simple enough to be well-served by a "yes" or "no" referendum. It is easy for the voters to say they want lower taxes, but a vote simply "lower taxes: yes or no?" oversimplifies the question beyond all reason. Such a vote could reasonably only be held if the voters knew the sorts of consequences that would result and could choose on the ballot also which alternative consequences they would like to go along with their lower taxes.

The sort of direct democracy that referenda and citizen initiatives provide is probably not very practical in today's situations which are so much more complex and involve so many more people than the idyllic situations in ancient Greece from which they evolved. — B.McL.

Circus Troubles

Our children were given two free passes for the Bates Bros. International Circus April 21 at the Juan de Fuca Recreation Centre. On attending, we found that we had misread the deceptive layout of the passes and instead of $2, which was insinuated, adult admission was in fact $5 apiece. We were not the only ones appalled. The ticket attendant was rude when I asked her what was going on. She refused to let me see the manager.

Having been acquainted with misrepresentative selling techniques, such as encyclopedia sales, I recognize the subtlety of the rip-off. Still, it is a rip-off, and I am very sorry to see this kind of thing happen in our community. — Mrs. Mary Halliday, Sooke.

Motor Madness

Of late we have been repeatedly exposed to new and ever more infuriating illegal acts of our provincial government and the employees of same. We are told of new acts of lying, stealing, cheating, misappropriation of funds, abused authority, colossal administrative blunders costing the B.C. taxpayers millions of dollars. We are virtually beaten mentally and spiritually insensitive with the continuing discoveries of the latest abuse of position by the present provincial government. We have become indifferent and irresponsible in our attention to new acts of tyrany by the Belleville Street goon squad.

The latest abuse is the banning of advertising and/or sponsorship of sporting events at Western Speedway (I am not connected with any distillery or the Speedway) by the liquor industry.

The stated reason for this ban was that cars and liquor don't mix. Quite right, they don't. However, liquor is not sold by Western Speedway. The motor sports sponsoring associations, the governing associations and the star performers in all levels of the sport spent hundreds of thousands of dollars and untold hours of their own telling the public about the misuse of alcohol and drugs.

Furthermore, any motor sport governing association I know of immediately suspends the competition licence of any member or the membership of any member found using alcohol or drugs at any event, and further, will suspend his licence to compete if he is suspended from driving on the public roads.

Furthermore, any group or participant sponsored by a distillery that gets into trouble and public notoriety for any reason will find themselves out of that all important sponsor's money, without which they can't compete.

Did all other sporting or cultural groups sponsored by the distilleries get the same edict that Western Speedway did? If not, why not? Could it be that motor sports and Western Speedway have been singled out for punishment because racing people have been critical of both Social Credit governments for their eternal ferry foul-ups that have seen competitors of Vancouver Island motor sports tracks unduly hassled and overcharged just to get onto this Island, where they spend thousands of dollars, that have seen people from out of the province and out of the country refuse to come here any(more for the motor sports events or off-season events of cultural groups because they got shafted when they came to compete? Would Willy Wonderkid really abuse his position to punish people who spoke out against his policies? Go back to paragraph one. — R. N. Fitz-Gerald, Victoria.

Heather Brae

A Heather Brae, Alta., school reunion is being planned Aug. 5-6 for all former students, teachers and residents who at one time lived in the Heather Brae district. High-priced Towing

This is a complaint against an auto towing company — Gordon's Towing, 1618 Store Street, Victoria.

The incident happened at Camosun College parking lot at 12:10 p.m. April 14. My car had been towed away by Gordon's, the reason being that I did not have a valid ticket.

Now, I am aware of my fault and perhaps had to be penalized. But my complaint is about the injustice of setting a price that does not fit the crime — to pay $25 for a 25-cent ticket. When I paid this amount to release the car, they told me that it is because Camsoun College is located out of the Victoria city limits and belongs to Saanich where they have obtained a licence to charge what they charge. Upon checking this information with the Saanich municipal information I learned that they applied for a licence but they have not been given to do so.

Now, in view of this random, rather unfair penalty, I am appealing to Saanich not to license this company and bring their prices under control.

In my opinion, this company's practice is similar to highway robbery. Also, previous to my payment of the $25 penalty, I learned that they charge from $15 to $50 on any reason they feel free to argue. I'd like to find out who is responsible for this outrageous practice this company is free to continue.

P.S.: I do not want to reveal my name in view of repression I may get from these people. — Citizen.

They Just Want to be Left Alone in 'Sunset City'

By ROBIN MEAD
Times of London

PHOENIX, Arizona — It is called Sun City, and although it has been built out in the Arizona desert miles from anywhere it is one of the fastest-growing towns in the United States. It is also one of the oddest.

And it is one of the richest. Its 45,000 residents include 16 millionaires and admit to having more than $800 million on deposit in the local savings and loan banks alone.

Sun City owes these peculiarities to the fact that it was built entirely for what the Americans like to call "oldsters." Everyone who lives there is over 50, and the average age is more than 65.

It is a nightmarish concept. But Sun City has been so successful, and property there is so much in demand, that work is now beginning on an adjoining twin town called Sun City West — a development which will eventually boost the population to 105,000.

The twin town will be a planner's dream. Most of the homes will be built around golf courses which stand out like green oases in the stark Arizona scenery. There are superb medical and sporting facilities, and the towns have brought jobs to what was once an economically hard-pressed area.

But the people of Maricopa County, the area which includes these boom towns, are not at all happy. They say that Sun City is a drain on county resources, and add unkindly that a better name for the township would be Sunset City.

When it comes to setting up a city government to run local affairs and provide local services, the oldsters of Sun City just aren't interested. "They simply say 'I'm retired and I am out here to have fun, leave me alone'," says Ellis Danner, president of the Home Owners' Association, one of the four rival civic groups which run Sun City on a voluntary basis.

"The county says that we are a drain on things like sanitation and police services because of our size, and the problem is going to get worse," Danner adds. "But we have no industry here, so we need a larger tax base for proper local services. Being part of the county provides such a base."

To back up their point of view, Sun City can produce a formidable — and very articulate — array of professional talent. The residents include former lawyers, government officials, high-ranking military officers and educationists, all with friends in high places and a readiness to make themselves heard.

A 71-year-old retired policeman from Cleveland, Ohio, who was playing bowls on one of the town's many greens, said: "I work in the house a little bit, and shoot pool. But I moved here to get away from the cold and the snow in winter and to relax — not to get involved in local politics. I have paid my taxes all these years, and now all I want is to be left alone. The county authorities will just have to look after us."

The degree of looking after is considerable. Sun City's streets are jammed with big air-conditioned cars, with the electric golf carts which the population have adopted as their favorite mode of transport for local journeys, and with old but healthily bronzed inhabitants warmed by an Arizona sun which shines most days of the year. They enjoy the facilities of 10 golf courses and seven recreation centres equipped with vast swimming pools.

But, as if to remind them that the days of wine and roses do not last forever, the street signs are often accompanied by a notice giving the location of the nearest oxygen inhaler.

There are three funeral parlors, a host of nursing homes, and the tallest building between the White Tanks Mountains in the north and downtown Phoenix 30 miles to the south is the triple-towered Walter O. Boswell Memorial Hospital.

But the people of Sun City are happy. They claim that they do their bit for the county by providing a lot of service jobs, doing an almost embarrassing amount of voluntary work, and filling the banks to overflowing. And they like things the way they are. "There are no hot-rodding teen-agers here," one of them said. "No kids making a noise. No through traffic because there's nowhere to go through to."

In Praise of that Gaudy Las Vegas Architecture

By PAUL GOLDBERGER

MGM Grand Hotel . . . architecture in the role of a stage set

LAS VEGAS — "Passing through Las Vegas is Route 91, the archetype of the commercial strip, the phenomenon at its purest and its most intense. We believe a careful documentation and analysis of its physical form is as important to architects and urbanists today as were the studies of medieval Europe and ancient Rome and Greece to earlier generations."

So stated the architects Robert Venturi and Denise Scott Brown as they set out from Yale in 1968 to try for the first time to bring serious architectural inquiry to the land of neon dreams. Other architects were scandalized, but students followed. By the time Venturi and Miss Scott Brown, along with Steven Izenour, published a book about their research in 1971, the phrase they took as their title, Learning from Las Vegas, had already become part of the architectural jargon. The gaudy strip held an allure for architects and architectural students eager to break away from the stern, dry world of the Bauhaus. Glass and steel bored, but neon beckoned.

All of which is to say that by now taking Las Vegas seriously as an architectural environment is nothing revolutionary — it has been done for a decade. But still, nothing — not the books, not the pictures, not the movies, not the Venturi polemics — quite prepares you for a first visit. Las Vegas, for better or for worse, is one of the most extraordinary visual sights in the world.

It is indeed as gaudy and as vulgar as its critics say, and it can be depressing. But there is a lot to learn from Las Vegas, and most of it has to do with the nature of stage sets. Almost every piece of architecture plays the role of stage set to some extent — that is, it contains at least some elements that exist not for any structural reason, but because of particular associations that are designed to evoke in us some sort of emotional response. Most places, in other words, are designed to make us think of other places and in Las Vegas these other places are palaces and fantasy castles. We are supposed to free-associate with Xanadu.

The city is remarkably consistent in a way. For all of its visual chaos, an order emerges if only because all of that neon and all of those moving bands of light bulbs blend into a kind of nervous haze. Besides the large hotel-casinos, there are smaller institutions, and each is after the same stage-set quality: wedding chapels look like miniature New England churches or tiny Gothic ones; restaurant entrances look like Roman temples and so forth.

Even the casinos themselves become objects of imitation; little coffee shops on the Strip have gigantic signs so that they, too, can play in the big leagues. The Mcdonald's downtown has a set of arches with flashing, animated light bulbs instead of the usual solid-colored arched sign, and there is even a six-storey parking garage downtown that is topped by a wavy cornice of blue neon. While the casinos are trying to look like Roman temples, the small establishments are trying to look like casinos.

The signs are what everyone talks about, and they are truly extraordinary. Nowhere is light used so fully as a means of defining space. On Fremont Street, the downtown street that had the largest casinos until they, like downtown department stores in every city in North America, were overtaken by bigger versions on highway strips in the suburbs, there are literally blocks of neon signs, several stories high, one running into the next to provide a solid wall of brilliant, dazzling color.

Out on the Strip, where the new and biggest casinos are, there is space and openness — the buildings are shopping centres, dependent upon their huge free-standing signs to bring visual excitement. But downtown there is density, an old-fashioned tightness as the buildings bump into each other on a narrow street. It is as if the canyon of a New York street were moved to the desert and the limestone exchanged for neon; somehow all of the coherence one expects of a good New York street like Wall Street or Park Avenue managed to survive the transition. The neon pulls Fremont Street together as well as the limestone pulls Wall Street together.

The Mint, which has a front that swoops up like a 1950's airline terminal, is covered entirely in pink neon. It looks like an Eero Saarinen building taken over by a casino. The Horseshoe, its next-door neighbor, is a brilliant turquoise blue, while the Golden Nugget across the street is an entire billboard of yellow neon. The Horseshoe's front is "modern," like a Los Angeles carwash, but seven stories high and lit up as bright as day. Every sign vibrates. The street is in constant motion, with strips of neon sliding up and down and in and out, yet the overall visual picture, like that of a theatre marquee, never actually changes.

The height of it all — and the only major Las Vegas monument to be erected since Robert Venturi, Denise Scott Brown and the author Tom Wolfe began to bring the city into the architectural consciousness of the nation — is the new M-G-M Grand Hotel, a 2,100-room extravaganza on the Strip.

The Grand may well be the only real building in the history of architecture designed to look like a back lot. It is not an attempt to make an opulent hotel in the real sense, but rather an attempt to create the kind of place that existed only in the movies, the kind of hotel in which Greta Garbo, John Barrymore and Joan Crawford stayed in the 1932 film from which the hotel takes its name. Here the idea of the stage set really has become the idea of the building.

The Grand awes you first with sheer size. There is a vast Moorish-Bauhaus-Italian Renaissance port-cochere in the front, with fountains and bad statuary all about. You enter right into a huge casino, all done in red with brocaded walls and rows and rows of chandeliers. The casino, bigger than any ballroom, is the man thing — the check-in desk is tucked away at the side, and the elevators are deliberately placed so that one must walk the length of the casino to reach one's room.

The style of the casino is Louis-Schmooey; off the casino floor are three restaurants — one also done in faked-up French style, but gold instead of red; an Italian restaurant with false stone balustrades and murals of Venice, and a den-like lair lined in imitation wood paneling. The designs, while silly, are skillful. All of the restaurants are entered from a platform, so that diners can make a grand entrance down three steps into the room. It is not for nothing that stage-set designers learn their tricks.

The M-G-M lion is a playful motif throughout — its image is on everything from ashtrays to elevator doors. The elevator cabs are extravaganzas of fake-marble Formica, chandeliers, gold columns and mirrors. The upstairs corridors are perhaps the best thing of all. They are endless, as Grand Hotel corridors should be, and every 10 feet or so there is a pair of Fibreglas columns on either side to break up the length. A beam runs across the hall above each pair of columns and is decorated with wallpaper that imitates classical details. On each guest room, the number is indicated by a plaque shaped like a star.

There is a lot of understanding of how to organize interior space here, and there is even more understanding of the nature of fantasy. The Grand, like all of the better-designed hotels here, is not a false striving for elegance, but a world unto itself, insular and smug. It creates its own contest, a contest of dreams, and its own standards — out here in the desert, what else could be expected?

STRAY FEATHERS

Golden-crowns Depart at Night

I should have known there was something in the wind. The signs were certainly there, they just didn't get through to me.

It was last Sunday, the first sunny day in more than a week. The usual horde was at the feeder — Purple Finches, House Finches, a Fox Sparrow, two towhees, and half a dozen Golden-crowned Sparrows. The juncos had left more than a week ago but a liquid whistle from a nearby oak revealed a new arrival — a cowbird, the first of the season. It was an idyllic scene but in it was the first sign of impending change — and I missed it.

As usual, I left the house early that day and dropped in at Beacon Hill Park to check up on a little colony of Brewer's Blackbirds that was preparing to take up residence there. Nothing unusual turned up at the park except a Bald Eagle that was quickly escorted on its way by a gang of raucous crows — all strong on talk but weak on action.

An hour or so later I was home again. The day had continued to improve. The wind had fallen off and the air was definitely warmer. And the feeder was still the centre of activity — so much so that I had to replenish the millet supply. My earlier serving was almost gone.

That was a clue to change too — but again I missed it. Normally I stock the tray first thing every morning and that's usually enough to last all day.

The activity at the feeder continued throughout the day. The Golden-crowns, particularly, seemed bent on eating everything in sight. I noticed how dapper they looked in their new spring finery, their yellow crowns — bordered by broad, black bands on each side — glowing in the bright sunlight. How different they looked from the drab, almost unmarked, Golden-crowns that had been with me all winter. And yet, they might be the same birds.

After supper things began to quieten down. The evening itself was a rarity this spring — clear, calm, pleasantly mild, and, most important, quiet.

Off in the west, Venus rode, just visible through the thin clouds that heralded an end to the brief spell of fine weather and the imminent arrival of yet another of those troublesome little storms that had been our weather diet for too long.

Checking the yard before closing up for the night, I was aware of the usual fluttering and fussing in the cotoneasters as the Golden-crowns settled down to sleep. But here again there was a signal, a lot of indifferent but persistent singing, the significance of which also passed me by. Usually, except for their nervous fluttering, the Golden-crowns settle down quietly.

I looked out again, long after dark. The rising moon was clearly visible but the thin cloud had now moved closer, cutting off all but the brightest stars. The prospect of two fine days in a row now seemed even more remote. Nor was there a sound in the yard. Everything seemed as it should be.

Next morning, again true to routine, I spent a few minutes in the yard before facing the tasks of the day. The air was filled with song — mostly Purple Finches' song, but there was one House Finch, and a Robin, joining the morning chorus. Even the cowbird was giving forth with its simple but pleasant call. But something was missing. At the time I couldn't put my finger on what, but something was missing.

Later, at breakfast, while glancing at the birds at the feeder, the penny dropped. The Purple Finches were there — so were the House Finches — but the Golden-crowns were not — nor was the Fox Sparrow.

It was then I realized what had been missing from the dawn chorus — the plaintive whistles of the Golden-crowns. It also came to me, at last, the significance of all of Sunday's activity at the feeder, and the extra fussing around the cotoneasters at night. The Golden-crowns were gone. They'd somehow got the signal to move, spent the day getting ready, and in the still of the night slipped quietly away.

This morning, on the strength of my millet, they were hundreds of miles north. I wondered where. Somehow I wished I'd recognized the signs sooner. I'd like to have spent a little more time with them. Oh, well! There's always next winter.

PEUGEOT 604 SL

This car matches the Mercedes-Benz 280E, the BMW 530i and the Jaguar XJ6L on any ground except comfort.

Because on this point, according to a unanimous European press, the Peugeot 604 surpasses all others.

Like the Mercedes 280E, it has fully independent suspension on all four wheels, a responsive six-cylinder engine (ours is a V-6), orthopaedic seats, impeccable finish and a unitized body with thousands of welds.

Like the BMW 530i, it has power assisted rack and pinion steering, four wheel power disc brakes and front and rear stabilizer bars.

Like the Jaguar XJ6L, it has air conditioning, power windows, reclinable seats. Options available are an electric sunroof and genuine leather upholstery.

Elsie Eliason got together with Lissa Chartier then business began to bloom.

When Elsie Eliason first opened her plant and crafts shop in Kamloops she was always too busy to give her customers the individual attention they deserve. Or to find the time to organize her business properly.

Then she got together with Lissa Chartier.

Lissa works five days a week.

She takes care of customers, keeps the store clean and when Elsie's not around, does a pretty good job of manageress.

And Elsie has the time to spend with her customers and to run her store the way she wants to.

Couldn't you use someone like Lissa Chartier?

Alaska Pipeline Role for BCR Still Not Decided

VANCOUVER (CP) — The president of Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd. says the company is still undecided whether it will use British Columbia Railway's debt-ridden Fort Nelson extension to transport materials required for construction of the Alaska Highway natural gas pipeline.

Ed Phillips said the company will be studying which transportation facilities to use in pipeline construction, but has not made any decisions.

"We have to know more precisely the source of all our materials," he said. "Once we know the source, the logistics can be crystallized."

Phillips was responding to a comment by Deputy Prime Minister Allan McEachen in Ottawa Thursday that builders of the proposed northern natural gas pipeline must determine whether the Fort Nelson extension is essential to supply of their project before costs of maintaining the rail line can be charged to them.

MacEachen, who is in charge of the Canada-United States agreement authorizing passage of the $10.5-billion pipeline through Canada, said that if the pipeline builders find the railway necessary for their project, then costs of maintenance could be allocated to the pipeline costs.

"If any transportation system is required by the pipeline applicants, then it is possible that the costs should be charged to the company," he told the Commons.

"It must be required by the company to be charged to the pipeline and eventually the cost of service to the consumer," he said.

Phillips said he is not prepared to state any company position on the issue, because it is governed by an international agreement and as an individual company "we have no say."

He said he could only assume MacEachen was speaking out of his knowledge of the international agreement when he made the comment.

MacEachen said he had met with Labor Minister Allan Williams and Economic Minister Don Phillips, and they had made a number of proposals.

Premier Bennett has said the B.C. proposals involve a transportation and communications system in northeastern B.C. related to the pipeline which would be financed by federal government subsidies and payments by the pipeline builders, Foothills Pipe Lines (Yukon) Ltd. and Westcoast Transmission Ltd. of Vancouver.

NURSES RAP HOSPITAL

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Registered Nurses Association of British Columbia said Friday that the Vancouver General Hospital's attitude towards nurses is degrading.

Larry Truitt, president of VGH, said Thursday in response to a petition and letter from hospital nurses for stronger status and improved educational programs that nurses have their own organization for professional concerns and that the request should go through the proper channels.

The association said that professionalism means "that all nurses are accountable for their action—and it also means that they must exercise some control over factors affecting their ability to deliver care."

Former Officer Guilty

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — A former New Westminster policeman has pleaded guilty in British Columbia Supreme Court to a charge of using a firearm in a manner dangerous to the public peace.

Justice J. C. Bouck reserved judgment until Monday in the case of Murray Ronald Harris, 46, who was previously charged with attempted murder. The charge was withdrawn by the Crown.

Crown counsel Robert Shantz said Harris fired four shots from inside his home March 22, 1977, in the direction of RCMP officers called to a domestic disturbance.

Colleen Harris, 47, from whom Harris now is separated, said he was breaking articles inside their house before police arrived and she was injured by a piece of glass from a broken light bulb.

RCMP, who had visited the Harris' home previously that day, returned when an ambulance was called for Mrs. Harris.

Harris was inside the house when police arrived and shot at officers crouched behind their cars. One of the officers returned his fire.

Shantz said shortly after the shots Harris came to the window and asked to talk to police.

Officers at the scene said Harris registered 120 milligrams of alcohol per 100 millilitres of blood and he told them he had drank a quart-and-a-half of hard liquor that day.

Inspector Ed Cadenhead of New Westminster city police testified Harris had been a hard working, conscientious policeman from 1962 to 1975, but tried to commit suicide while still with the force in February, 1975.

Holiday Firm Probe Set

VANCOUVER (CP) — An investigation into the financial difficulties of Consumer Holidays Ltd. was ordered Friday by Alec Burden, registrar of travel services for British Columbia.

Burden said in a news release the Vancouver company's registration had been suspended under the Travel Agents Registration Act.

He said the company will not be able to provide travel services for for about 500 persons who have paid deposits. Some of the people were scheduled to leave for trips this weekend.

Burden said all persons who booked trips with Consumer Holidays after Feb. 21 will be eligible to recover their deposits from the company or a fund established by the new act.

Consumer Holidays has been wholesaling tours by bus to Reno, las Vegas and someCalifornia points, said Burden, and also has acted as a wholesaler for other package tours.

He said bookings were made through various travel agents in B.C. and through the company itself.

Burden said the Association of Travel Agents of B.C. have volunteered to assist in affected travellers completing their travel plans.

He said his investigation will determine whether the company's registration is revoked, adding that assets of the company have been frozen under provisions of the act.

Mountie Blames Partner

NANAIMO (CP) — One of three RCMP officers charged with assault causing bodily harm told his county court trial Friday that another accused officer was forced to slap and kick a Vancouver man who was struggling with them after being arrested for drunkenness.

Constable Dave Downey testified that Constable Bruce Waite used the measures to control Robert Raymond Simms in the Ladysmith RCMP detachment on Oct. 2, 1977.

Downey, Waite and constable William Van Wormer are charged with assaulting Simms.

Simms testified earlier that he was picked up by police after leaving a hotel in the Vancouver Island community, where he had been drinking.

Downey testified Simms was taken to the detachment, and he began struggling with officers in the booking room.

The officer said that while he and Waite were trying to put handcuffs on Simms, he held on to Simms' hair while the arrested man lay on his back on the floor and kicked, struggled and yelled.

He said Simms reached up and was trying to grab Waite's genitals, holding the officer's upper leg and refusing to let go.

Downey said Waites slapped Simms twice across he face with his open hand, but he would not release his grip on Waites' leg. He said the officer than kicked Simms twice with the top part of his foot, and Simms quit the struggle.

Downey said at no time did he hit Simms, kick him or see anyone hit the man with a belt.

The trial continues.

PESTICIDE BLAST

PENTICTON (CP) — The South Okanagan Board of Health decided Friday to remain opposed to the use of the chemical 2,4-D as a method of fighting the Eurasian milfoil infestation in the Okanagan Lakes system.

Members of the board voted 7-to-3 against a resolution by Jack Tait of Oliver to sanction the use of the chemical subject to certain conditions.

The vote followed a four-hour meeting at which the board discussed the provincial government's proposed aquatic weed control program with project biologist Dr. Peter Newroth and two members of the three-person scientific committee set up by the provincial government to make recommendations on the type of program to be introduced this summer.

Dr. Courtland Mackenzie, a committee member, said 2,4-D could be used in the lake system without harm to public health provided certain criteria were met.

Dr. D. A. Clarke, medical director of the health unit, said that by supporting the use of 2,4-D the health board would be setting a precedent as the first health board in the world to allow the introduction of a poison.

"There is no doubt the use of pesticides in the valley is out of control," he said.

Red Homer In Race

RICHMOND (CP) — Homer Stevens of Delta has been nominated to run for the Communist Party in the federal riding of Richmond-South Delta.

Stevens, 54, a commercial fisherman, was named by acclamation.

"The future of Canada is bleak unless the federal government recognizes the need for a new "made-in-Canada" constitution recognizing the equal rights of French and English Canadians," Stevens said, in accepting the nomination.

Merger Vote Set

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — About 2,300 members of the Canadian Association of Smelter and Allied Workers at Kitimat and Yellowknife will vote May 4 and 5 on a proposed merger with the 6,000 member Canadian Association of Industrial, Mechanical and Allied Workers Union.

A CAIMAW spokesman said the larger union has already decided to accept CASAW and if the merger is approved CASAW would retain its name and local autonomy, but CAIMAW would speak on a national level.

How Wide is Your Child's Outlook?

The Chinese have a wise saying, "Every man sees the world through his own keyhole." St. Michaels University School believes an important part of education must be to widen each youngster's keyhole — to give him or her a wider outlook on life. That is why reading is so important.

Through books, boys and girls can explore every corner of the world. They can meet great men and women of the past. They can learn about the present day and dream about the future. Reading stimulates imagination and thought and can give lifelong enjoyment.

That is why at St. Michaels University School pupils from Grade 1 to Grade 10 have a daily reading period. Indeed, if pupils in school do no more than learn to read avidly and with enjoyment, they will be well on their way to becoming literate, educated men and women. They will see the world through a wider keyhole.

For details of Scholarship and Entrance Tests at St. Michaels University School, apply to John Schaffter, M.A., Headmaster, 3400 Richmond Rd., Victoria, B.C. V8P 4P5. 592-4022

JUDGE TO AID PLAN

Provincial Court Judge Les Bewley will help organize the provincial government's compulsory heroin treatment plan, Health Minister Bob McClelland said Friday.

The minister said Bewley has been granted a leave of absence from the bench.

Mudslinging Basic Ingredient of Politics: Mussallem

George Mussallem (SC-Dewdney) said Friday he does not agree with a colleague that change is necessary in the British Columbia legislature.

Cyril Shelford (SC—Skeena), a former Social Credit cabinet minister, said last week he will not run in the next provincial election because he is fed up with the amount of time wasted by members attacking each other rather than attacking problems.

He said that 80 per cent of the time is spent in personal attacks and 20 per cent on attacking problems.

"The B.C. legislature, in my opinion, has a very good performance level," Mussallem said during taping of the television program Capital Comment for viewing Sunday night.

He said that "mudslinging is the basic ingredient in the political forum."

"Since parliament began in the British system which we follow, the success is based on the fact of the free flow of words of all kinds," said Mussallem.

"We could very easily go to work with party whips and arrange fine decorum and fine manners and fine judgements — everything very beautiful. It would look good on camera, but the public would be badly served."

Portugal's premier city

Elegance at low price

By PHILIP SOUSA

As a matter of fact, a recent worldwide survey reveals this is one of the least-expensive capitals in the world.

Of particular interest to prospective visitors are two of the various items covered by the study made by a Swiss management consultant firm: hotel rates and the cost of food.

While London ranked low on the total cost of living 57-city list, the survey shows the British capital had the highest hotel rates — $75.71 a day for a single room in a modern hotel. In Lisbon, on the other hand, a similar hotel room goes for $24.69.

In Stockholm, ranked in the study as Europe's most expensive city, a three-course dinner for four at a first-class restaurant will set you back a whopping $230, while here in Lisbon the tab is a modest $47.

Reasonable prices, however, is but one feature of this once provincial and elegant old town, this period piece of a place whose origins go back to the 1st Century B.C.

Stroll around Lisbon today — and this is a city you best discover on foot, especially the fascinating old quarters — and you will feel as if you are gliding over a rich and colorful tapestry woven by Romans, Phoenicians, Visigoths, Moors and for the last 800 years, by Portuguese.

Living testimony of this past is the Alfama, a maze of narrow streets, noisy roosters, flower-thick balconies, laundry in full flight, beautiful children, still-standing 16th Century dwellings, armies of cats, tiny shops packed with fresh produce and fragrant spices, and rugged men briefly home from the sea and the docks.

At the edge of the Alfama, this casbah of a neighborhood that is Lisbon's oldest quarter, stands St. George's Castle from whose ancient ramparts you'll get one of the finest views of the city and the busy Tagus River on which it sits.

Below this historic perch in the lower town, or Baxia, you'll find Rossio Square, the city's heart and the best spot for people-watching.

Formally known as Dom Pedro IV Square, this is the hub from which radiate scores of mostly narrow streets crammed with shops of every sort; busy cafes; crowded little bars where tourists sip port and locals drink wine; restaurants dishing out caldeirada (the Portuguese version of bouillabaisse), bacalhau (codfish), porco a alentajana (pork and clams), sardinas assadas (grilled sardines) and other delicacies.

Lots of good and reasonable shopping in this area, but it's even more fun and adventuresome to browse along the twisting arteries of the Alfama and Barrio Alto, another hilltop neighborhood above Rossio Square. The number of antique shops in both these sections — as well as the quality of what's in them — will impress you.

You'll marvel at the beauty of the embroidered rugs, the linens, copperware, chandeliers, furniture, bookbinding and, indeed, antiques from almost every period and corner of the world. And as with almost everything else here, prices that compare favorably with those of most other capital cities.

Under its nearly constant balmy sun and blue sky, Lisbon's mix of rural gentleness and classy modernism is made even more palatable by the abundance of parks, gardens and flowers.

One of the most attractive spots, one popular with both Lisbonians and visitors, is sprawling Edward VII Park. One of the several arteries that radiate from these splendid gardens is Avenida da Liberdade, Liberty Avenue, a wide and tree-lined mile-long street flanked by a host of fine shops, sidewalk cafes and hotels.

Riot of color springs up over Arizona's rugged desert

Travel Tips

By STAN DELAPLANE

It's spring on the Arizona desert. A sunny, mild 25 degrees. The desert birds chirp as cheerily as if they were on the payroll of the chamber of commerce.

The blooming desert is showered with wild flowers: Lavender scorpion weed and yellow brittle bush. Sky-blue lupine and orange flowers of ocotillo. Most people think the ocotillo desert plant is a cactus but it is not. (I just wanted to get that in because every time I say ocotillo cactus, I receive a thousand letters from the desert plant people pointing out my lack of knowledge.)

This is the great California/Arizona desert where in the rugged back country you can still find mule deer and desert sheep. Full of quail and jack rabbits. There are wild horses and wildcats. And at night, coyotes yip into a skyful of a million stars.

We came down here for the grand opening of The Rigistry Resort of Scottsdale—the first facility of its type to be constructed in 15 years. It will have a total of 323 rooms. It has 21 tennis courts, all lit for night play. Two championship golf courses adjacent to the resort. Room rates start at $95 high season.

The Registry Hotel Corporation are new in the business. This is their fourth hotel. Though there is nothing to indicate a connection with the Marriott chain, some of the executives are former Marriott top brass.

They flew in an assortment of press, travel agents, architects and for all I know plumbers for the weekend.

Scottsdale was built about 20 years ago as a sort of John Wayne type setting of a Western town. Everybody wore boots and there were hitching posts all along the street. And you were miles from Phoenix. Now Phoenix runs almost up to the doorways of Scottsdale and the hitching posts are gone.

The weather is still as beautiful. This year the desert is amazingly green. Oldtimers in Arizona cannot remember when there were so many wild flowers and so much green grass in the fashionable Camelback resort area.

The stores still sell Indian jewelry and the cactus wren still builds a nest in the saguaro cactus. Indian Navahos cut these out and make sewing baskets out of them for sale to the tourists. The only difference today is that the prices have just about tripled. Even though fewer people are using needle and thread and are now using Japanese made sewing machines.

Scottsdale was built as a dude ranch town. While it is a little on the plastic side, it looks as good as any of the movie sets that Hollywood turns out.

Naturally for this type of town, you have to have horses. And people to ride them.

My home on the range is a plush villa at The registry Resort in Scottsdale. Each morning the visiting guests ride by my picture window. They are quite a picture.

They ride horses, an unpredictable beast with a frightening mouth and four legs—any one of which can kick you from thisaway to thataway. And will, too, if he gets a chance.

There is some talk among sentimentalists that horses are men's best friend. And when I was knee-high to a pony, I felt the same way myself. At that time William S. Hart of the silent movies was my dream of what every boy should be.

Hart was constantly kissing his horse goodbye. We wept like anything at the Saturday matinees when he kissed his horse.

Fortunately in those golden days, there were plenty of horses.

This is the problem with sawing off such nonsense on the young. It gives them an absurd value of the animal kingdom.

Later as I grew up, at times I had to ride a horse.

And if you ask me, anybody who pays $5 an hour for this privilege is as daffy as they come. I would gladly pay $10 an hour just not to ride a horse. It is the poorest invention for travel I have ever run across.

Singapore's pulsating waterfront

Chinese culture fading in commercial Singapore

By JOSEPH N. BELL

SINGAPORE — Your reaction to Singapore is very likely to be deeply conditioned by the direction from which you enter this island-nation. If you come directly from North America, you may be mildly disappointed. If you come from Indonesia or Malaysia, you may be exhilarated.

We came in from Jakarta, and Singapore looked like a small slice of paradise. The first impression of the city (on the drive from the airport) is of one immense, lush park. The grass is green and well-tended, the trees are full and fragrant, the streets are broad and smooth, the traffic is tightly controlled, and buildings have clean, modern lines.

Everything — and I do mean everything — is impeccably tidy. And in Singapore, this isn't a facade to hide squalor; the government's program to level slums is proceeding quickly and effectively. The waterfront and the crowded Chinese areas of the city have a clean, fresh — the disapproving might say sterile — look to them.

To the traveller coming from the chaos and frequent poverty of crowded Indonesian or Malaysian towns and cities, this order and cleanliness is doubly welcome. There is less tendency to wonder how it got that way than simply to enjoy the creature comforts: fine hotels, excellent cuisine (both Continental and Oriental), glittering shops and stores, discotheques and night life for those who want it.

But the visitor who expects to see the exotic Singapore of old Humphrey Bogart movies, the shady waterfront characters, inscrutable natives up to their sampans in intrigue, shadowed streets and alleys leading off to adventure, are going to be desperately disappointed.

Singapore is a modern, bustling commercial phenomenon, a social experiment of breathtaking proportions, and — at the moment, at least — a remarkable success story. Its people are beautiful and prosperous, and its society works.

What becomes clear after a few days — or perhaps more quickly to the visitor coming directly from North America— is that this has been accomplished at some cost. Much of the old culture of Singapore (even though the Chinese still make up three-fourths of the population) is disappearing beneath the demolition equipment.

Personal freedom is strictly limited. When citizens are relocated, they are simply ordered to move. Usually, their new home is in one of the high-rise concrete apartment complexes being built by the hundreds by the Singapore government.

Although each unit is surrounded by park land and recreational facilities, the visitor cannot help wondering how long it will take before these apartments become ghettos and the residents turn restless.

Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew's rule is authoritarian (crime control, for instance, includes flogging.) Trade unions are not permitted. Government rulings are questioned at peril.

Laws are tough and enforced. Anyone caught littering pays a $200 fine. Cars cannot enter the central city without at least four passengers. Drug trafficking is punishable by death. The Singapore residents with whom I talked insisted that such Draconian measures were necessary to strengthen this tiny nation against the giants — many of them communist — that border it so closely.

They also insisted that the 2.8 million people who live in Singapore generally support the policies of their government, and I saw no evidence to the contrary in the few days we visited.

Still, these questions prick at the mind of the Western visitor to Singapore. But what of more prosaic matters, closer to the heart of the casual tourist?

I found the shopping, for which Singapore is most noted, to be somewhat disappointing. Shops are mostly small and clustered in dozens of shopping centres throughout the city. They are very heavy on photographic and electronic equipment; it seemed that almost every other store featured such merchandise. Bargains are not all that easy to find, in spite of Singapore's reputation. Shopkeepers expect you to dicker with them; if you don't enjoy this game, you won't enjoy shopping.

To this visitor, the Chinese marketplace proved much more interesting. There, foodstuffs are bought day-to-day, even though refrigeration is now commonplace in Singapore. Meat is butchered on the spot in the street markets, and some of it is decidedly exotic. (We saw, for example, a python beheaded and cut into steaks while a group of morning shoppers waited and watched.)

The Chinese have preserved a piece of their culture against the encroaching high-rise buildings, but it seems to be shrinking quickly — a good reason for seeing Singapore soon.

Where the Dutch impact on Indonesia is spotty and increasingly difficult to find, the British influence on Singapore is everywhere present.

Former British military installations have been taken over by the Singapore military or put to use as public buildings and recreational centres. The British fort that guarded Singapore Bay is still intact, its guns pointing out to sea, as they did when the Japanese attacked from the rear in 1942.

The skyride to visit this fort offers a breathtaking view of Singapore, and the historical artifacts preserved there provide a graphic account of the fall of the island to the Japanese, its subsequent liberation, and independence from Britain.

Without question, a visit to Singapore involves a much milder culture shock than any other Asian city. As a bridge between East and West, it can offer the visitor a firm footing on familiar cultural terrain while he puts a tentative toe into the Asiatic lifestyle that surrounds Singapore on every side.

Dorado Beach, 28 kilometres west of San Juan: always glorious

Puerto Rico regaining golden tourist touch

By DAVID BUTWIN

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico — Most of the islands I know and love are not what they used to be, but one that I wish I had met in more innocent days is doing something about it.

Puerto Rico it is, and if the very mention brings to mind an Hispanic Miami beach, a tropical West Side Story, or worse, then accept the word of this long-time island fancier: there are few prettier, livelier, and more diverse specks of land in any sea.

Does that surprise you? It may if you're one who thinks of Puerto Rico first as a major contributor to urban welfare problems on the U.S. East Coast and it may if you've heard that the island has lost the golden tourist touch it had in the 1960s.

I for one happen to think Puerto Rico is much-maligned, and I didn't see the Island commonwealth in the 60s. So when I dropped in a few weeks ago, I came with an open mind — that and a body desperately in need of some sunshine and tennis.

In fact on three visits spread over six or seven years, I have never known the Caribbean's third largest island to be anything but inviting and friendly. Clearly, however, the government feels the entire tourist industry needs to put on a new face.

Puerto Rico is old, as Caribbean destinations go. Its hotels and golf courses have been picked over since the 1950s, particularly since Castro closed off Cuba.

"For years," said a New York public relations woman who is helping to forge a new image for Puerto Rico, "the government simply let the beaches and streets go to pieces. Puerto Ricans began to take more pride in working in a factory than in a hotel."

If the beaches around San Juan look cleaner this year and if your hotel bed is more neatly made, it may be that an aggressive tourist improvement campaign is working. Hoping to give islanders in the industry (some 80,000 in all) renewed pride, the government has gone so far as to bestow awards on the best chambermaids, skycaps, and chefs. San Juan taxi drivers, said to be among the world's most cunning, are being asked to reform.

Also, and this has cost millions, the government is pumping money into sagging and, in some cases, closed hotels.

For example, the venerable Caribe Hilton, which was the first full-scale resort hotel in the Caribbean when it opened on Condado Beach in 1949, is humming as never before; El Conquistador, a gaudy but well-landscaped resort on the North Coast, recently reopened, and El Convento, now managed by a prestigious Italian chain, CIGA, has been smartly restored in Old San Juan.

Even in the worst of times, no one ever questioned the Dorado Beach Hotel, a Laurance Rockefeller project 20 miles west of San Juan. Carved out of a gorgeous beachfront plantation in 1958, Dorado is still playing to a quiet, moneyed country club set under a new manager, Regent International of Hong Kong.

Its sister hotel, neighboring Cerromar Beach, my home for four days in December, attracts low-key conventioners to its muffled, carpeted good taste. Lately, too, the Cerromar has installed an amenity no Rock resort would have dreamed of: a discotheque. Its music, I trust, in keeping with the Rockefeller tradition, will not altogether drown out the nightly chorus of coquis, Puerto Rico's musical tree frogs.

Life at Cerromar and Dorado is keyed to endless sport and leisure. This is not the place for those who want to explore back roads or remote fishing villages. From the 7th (and top) floor of the 500-room Cerromar, the Island's misty green central mountain range looks no more realistic than the tourist posters on my bedroom walls. For a price (about $120 a day double without meals) you can toy with two golf courses, 13 tennis courts, pool, and beach.

Next door, the jungle, low-rise Dorado Beach has two courses that its well-travelled golf director, Mike Reynolds, rates among the four best in the West Indies. The others are at Casa de Campo in the dominican Republic and Fountain Valley on St. Croix. Terry Ryan, a South African former touring pro, heads the tennis program at both hotels (Dorado has seven courts), and he is not ashamed to say that an hour's lesson with him costs $50.

Welby Van Horn, the dean of Puerto Rico's tennis instructors, charges an even higher rate ($30 a half hour) at the Caribe Hilton in San Juan.

He was tutoring Puerto Rico's best young players and untold numbers of tourists at the Caribe when Terry Ryan, and I for that matter, weren't much taller than tennis rackets.

I would like to have known Puerto Rico then, but today's version will do just fine.

Tracks lead to York

The only place in the world where you can get a worm's eye view of the underside of a locomotive, together with a glimpse inside Queen Victoria's private saloon is the National Railway Museum, the first national museum to be established outside London in York.

York, one of the finest medieval walled and gated cities in Europe, has been a regional capital since Roman times. It is a sight both fascinating and informative, to the layman as well as the railway buff.

Monte Carlo's wheels turned by holidaymaker

ON THE GO
With Jerry Hulse

MONTE CARLO, Monaco — So all this time you thought that gambling kept the wheels spinning in Monte Carlo? Tilt. It's tourism.

Without bodies, the roulette wheels wouldn't turn, dice wouldn't rattle and the slot machines wouldn't hum.

Without the masses, Monaco doubtlessly would be a tapped-out principality, somnolent and insolvent.

And so it is that Prince Rainier and the Societe des Bains de Mer (SDM) keep their antennas tuned to the whims of tourism (the Societe being a publicly held company which operate the world-famous casino, hotels, restaurants, nightclubs and other enterprises.)

Several years ago, when it appeared that Monte Carlo was cashing in (so to speak), the Prince and the Societe decided to prime the pump which churns out the dollars, the drinks and the like.

The younger crowd had been spending too much time in St. Tropez and Juan-les-Pins and the Prince was concerned.

Said Rainier, "We cannot go on simply catering to the super-rich."

As a result, the Prince faced the future squarely: No longer were there sufficient numbers of wealthy potentates and royal heads to pay the bills, so it was decided that the tiny principality would turn to the masses.

What the Prince and the SBM began seeking were low-rollers as well as high-rollers. That they bore no titles was of no concern to the Prince, nor that they weren't dressed in Gucci sandals or decked out by Yves Saint Laurent.

The rustle of francs is what really counted.

Well, one must pay the piper, of course. And so it is that the principality grew; it went the way of the rest of the world, with high-rise office buildings and super condominiums, scores of construction companies, banks and real estate offices and a couple of thousand private businesses.

Streets today are as crowded as New York at noontime. Traffic moves bumper to bumper. Shops overflow with customers. And the cash registers ring-a-ding-ding.

Nevertheless, it's exciting, it's extravagant, it's tempting.

True, a certain luster has been lost. Not everyone drives a Rolls or a Bentley any more (although certainly Monaco has more than its share of limousines.) Now the avenues are crowded with VWs and Simcas as well as the Ferraris and Lamborghinis driven by former kings and current film stars.

Blue bloods still congregate in Monaco, but so do tour groups from Tokyo and Texas whose drawls are heard up and down Boulevard des Moulins.

Prince Rainier's principality involves barely 500 acres, an area roughly half the size of New York's Central Park. Nevertheless, each day at noon the Carillon announces the changing of the guard. While one small platoon marches in, another marches out — representing the entire military establishment of this lively little storybook kingdom in which no one is drafted, no one pays income taxes, the budget is balanced and unemployment is nonexistent.

It's a super little power.

Monte Carlo is famous, of course, for Princess Grace and the grand old casino that faces gardens which are smothered with flowers; they bloom all the way from the entrance to Avenue de la Costa and Boulevard des Moulins.

As for the casino, it comes off as a sort of Wagnerian Las Vegas with crystal chandeliers, elaborate frescoes and baroque domes.

One is pressed for both passport and admission. For a few extra francs the visitor is permitted to join the Beautiful Crowd in the upholstered inner sanctum where grandes dames drip with jewels and gentlemen parade about in dinner jackets.

Unfortunately, it's all about as lively as a Russian wake.

The action's next door in the Las Vegas-style casino operated by Loews, the new 637-room hotel built on land reclaimed from the sea.

It is difficult indeed to determine if one is actually in Monte Carlo or Caesars Palace. It's noisy, it's exciting, it's informal.

What's more, the Europeans love it.

That old Vegas expression, "Come as you are," serves it well. Wealthy Italians in black tie gamble alongside North Americans in leisure suits and Frenchmen in jeans.

They play roulette and blackjack (as opposed to chemin de fer and 30-40.) They shout, they drink. And they wager huge, huge bets.

To quote manager Jerry Tassone, "It's the biggest action I've seen in a casino in 22 years."

Tassone, who was recruited by Lowes from the Las Vegas Landmark, gathered other Vegas habitues, including ex-pit boss Russ Hood from the Thunderbird.

Operated precisely like a Vegas casino, Loews fusses over gamblers, providing free drinks and free cigarettes — spreading all the free ambience of a typical American casino.

Jerking a thumb toward the old casino next door, Tassone remarked, "They'd never understand a group of Texans crowded around a table shouting and shooting craps...."

Not only are North Americans fond of the hotel, but Europeans seem to take to Loews as well. At Loews, casino passports aren't required. Neither is there an admission charge. Gaming tables operate from 1 o'clock in the afternoon until 5 o'clock the next morning. And they'll continue the rest of the day should there be a high-roller looking for big action.

Hundreds of North Americans join Loews' gambling junkets. Each player puts up between $5,000 and $7,500. It's front money and they're obliged to gamble it in return for the free transportation, hotel room, meals and drinks.

Win or lose, the trip is paid for. And surprisingly — considering the distance involved — there are those who return four and five times a year.

While no one has ever broken the bank at Loews, occasionally they've come close to it. One guest walked away with a tidy $150,000 one night recently. Another who returns three or four times a year is richer to date by more than $300,000.

Of course there's also a legion of losers.

Loews offers the same odds that Las Vegas does. Whenever someone asks for credit, the hotel telexes directly to New York, where the information is flashed to Central Data in Las Vegas.

(Within minutes, the answer comes back: high-roller or high risk.)

beds be redesigned with snaps instead of knotted ties to make their removal easier in such emergencies.

Chief fire warden George Birnie told the inquest that the construction and fire alarms were substandard compared with requirements now followed under the 1975 National Building Code.

Exact cause of the fire remains a mystery although Inspector J. W. Clydesdale of the provincial fire marshal's office and Inspector Arlend Pargee of the city fire prevention department testified they believe it resulted from a smoldering cigarette.

Clydesdale said the cigarette or other smoker's material such as a match, probably smoldered for up to three hours in the blankets of Walker's bed before igniting.

Contradicting Jaworsky's statement that residents of the home were not allowed to smoke in their rooms, Clydesdale said he found cigarette butts and other evidence of smoking in the rooms of an upper floor room.

Jaworsky also said it was impossible that the three victims could have handled a cigarette with their restraining jackets on.

Davis Welcomes Laying of Charges

"How long does this have to go on?"

Davis was fired from his cabinet post on April 3. Three days later, both he and Attorney-General Garde Gardom made statements in the house giving a few more details about the investigation into the airline ticket dealings, but still left a lot of questions unanswered.

Then for the next three weeks, Davis became the subject of much speculation while the RCMP report into his activities was bandied about between officials in the attorney-general's office and lawyers independent of the ministry trying to determine if charges should be pressed.

Gardom finally received recommendations from Vancouver lawyers David Sigler and Harvey Grey and "after considering the material, I have concluded that final determination of the matter requires the consideration of the courts."

The writ was served today to Davis' lawyer, McEachern, 26 days after Davis' dismissal from the cabinet.

Gardom said outside counsel was sought "to ensure that the rsponsibility of the ministry in this matter may be discharged with all possible care, after full and complete examination."

He added that the laying of the charge does not indicate any prejudgment as to the guilt or innocence of Davis.

Ambulance Men Praised

Two Nanaimo ambulance attendants have been praised by Saanich police for their quick action in helping four persons injured in a two-car head-on collision Friday.

The accident was one of two in the area overnight.

A spokesman said a letter is being sent to the provincial ambulance corps commending the actions of Peter Tryon and Bruce Hacking.

The two were on a non-emergency run back to Nanaimo shortly before 10:30 p.m. when they came upon the accident at the Trans Canada Highway and Douglas.

They administered first aid until police arrived.

"They were so quick and so professional," the spokesman said. "The injuries would undoubtedly have been far worse if they hadn't come along just then."

Injured were Claus Peter Greczmiel, 21, driver of one of the cars, and passenger Karen Milbradt, 19, both of Richmond, and Michael Douglas Milligan, 19, of 3050 Pickford, driver of the second car, and passenger Danial McDonagh, 19, of 2241 Aldean.

Milligan and McDonagh are in fair condition in Victoria General Hospital with head and chest injuries.

The other two are reported in fairly good condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital.

In the other accident two Armed Forces servicemen received multiple injuries when a motorcycle they were riding collided with a truck at Lampson and Devonshire at about 8:30 p.m.

James Ervan Dotten, 21, and Donald Joseph Vieau, 23, were listed in fair condition in Victoria General this morning.

Police Use Motorcycles to Point Youngsters in the Right Direction

By MARK HUME
Times Staff

They're a whole different breed of biker. Some of them were real troublemakers, hard cases, and the rest were either on the verge of delinquency or were exhibiting behavioral problems.

They had to be before they made the Victoria police department's Wheels motorcycle club.

Wheels is a unique police community relations program that focuses on crime prevention and uses motorcycles to draw juveniles away from pathways that seem destined to end in the courts and jail.

The Wheels' juveniles are kids that were having difficulty relating to society, but when it came to bikes — dirt bikes that rapped and whined and took on hills as if there were no such thing as gravity — their troubles disappear in a cloud of dust.

"It's almost an instant love. Once they touch those bikes and ride them they never want to leave them alone . . . kids and motorcycles just seem to go together. It's really something to see."

The results, he says, are phenomenal.

Probation officers Derek Johnston and Dave Turner, who are also involved with Wheels, agree.

They tell of sullen kids that wouldn't talk suddenly opening up, of losers that turn into winners, of hard-nosed delinquents who undergo such extensive personality changes that they hardly seem like the same kids.

There's only one thing wrong with the program. It needs $15,000 — otherwise the limp it now has because of the lack of a full-time co-ordinator might cripple the whole project.

Smith says the YMCA pulled out of the program this winter, leaving the organization without someone to co-ordinate.

The project, which involves about 50 boys and girls between the ages of 11 and 15, calls for a lot of planning. The youngsters are organized into four separate community groups, they share eight 155 cc bikes, bought by the Victoria Kiwanis club for about $5,000, and each group gets the bikes for one day every second weekend. The machines must be maintained; the trips must be co-ordinated; the Wheels' volunteers must be kept informed — in short, it's a full-time job keeping things running smoothly.

Says Smith: "The project co-ordinator was paid for by the Y. In February we were notified that he would be withdrawn because the work was not within their mandate . . . (and) as a result of that there's a possibility our project may be in jeopardy. You've absolutely got to have a paid person doing the gopher jobs."

Smith made his statements while in a meeting with Victoria Ald. Robin Blencoe at City Hall. Johnston and Turner were present, along with Kiwanis representative Frank Hegyi.

Blencoe promised to go to bat for Wheels in an attempt to get the city to fund the project co-ordinator, and Hegyi informed Smith that no matter what happened the Kiwanis would stand behind the program.

"We'll buy more bikes if that's what's required . . . we consider this project to be a great success story," said Hegyi.

Smith said the program, which is believed to be the only one of its kind in Canada, could use more bikes, more money and more volunteers from the community. About the only thing there isn't a shortage of is kids.

The constable said the Wheels organization, which hates to turn people away who are in need of help, has a waiting list.

Given the financial and volunteer support that's needed, he said, the extent of the program could probably double almost overnight.

Blencoe said Wheels has been an unqualified success and should be greatly expanded.

"This is the direction we should be taking — more preventative measures are what's needed."

Smith and the two probation officers stressed that prevention was what the program is all about.

"The difference is that the social services sit back and wait for a kid to be identified as a delinquent (by committing a crime). But what we're trying to do is deal with potential trouble makers. To get to them before the fact," said Johnston.

Many of the kids involved have been in trouble with the police, but most are referred to the program by teachers, school counselors, parents or community members who are concerned about an individual.

Most of the juveniles think of themselves as losers when they first join Wheels, said Smith, but the challenge of dirt biking soon turns that around.

"It's remarkable what happens. They know that every two weeks they're going to be riding. For some of them that's all they can depend on . . . and it's something they don't want to jeopardize. They really look forward to it and I can guarantee you that they don't get in trouble during the week. I know, because I don't see their names coming across my desk (at the police station) any more."

He adds that in four years none of the 150 kids who have participated in the program has gotten into any serious trouble. And that statistic stands, he points out proudly, despite the fact that some of the juveniles were pretty hard cases before they met the dirt bikes.

"It's not just a case of giving kids goodies to keep them out of trouble," adds Johnston. "We expect growth."

And they've been getting it.

Smith praised the probation officers, the Kiwanis club, and the community and police volunteers for making the program work. But, he said, the battle was really won by the motorcycles.

"Bad" kids, it seems, will do just about anything to tackle a hill on a dirt bike — even get nice.

JOGGER HELPS CATCH A THIEF

A lady jogger helped Esquimalt police nab a young thief early today.

A spokesman said the woman was jogging past the Gorge Vale Texaco station at about 12:30 a.m. when she noticed someone inside and called police.

Officers raced to the station and surprised a 16-year-old boy who had broken in and was busy prying open a cash drawer on the till.

The juvenile has been charged with breaking and entering.

Two Held Following Robbery

Victoria police have two men in custody following an overnight robbery.

A spokesman said the men, aged 22 and 42, were arrested within an hour of the holdup at Ron's Chevron service station, 2200 Quadra.

The service station attendant told police two men entered the station at 8:55 p.m. and demanded money. One of the men simulated a gun in his coat pocket.

The attendant handed over a small amount of cash and the pair ran off.

Police nabbed the younger of the two suspects at Douglas and Pembroke at 9:30 p.m. and a half-hour later picked up the other suspect inside the Bastion Inn on Government.

They were to appear in provincial court today charged with robbery and were expected to be remanded in custody to Monday for plea.

Ryan Backing AirWest

Ald. Larry Ryan said today he is hopeful a home can be found for AirWest somewhere in Victoria harbor.

"There are jobs to protect and the airline operates a useful service," he said.

Ryan said he spoke harshly about the company during the protracted labor dispute, which lasted five months, but now that it is being resolved he is prepared to support the company in its search for a permanent home somewhere in the harbor.

"It is a matter of negotiation between the company and city council," Ryan said. "I hope we can reach a solution that satisfies everyone."

The company will approach city council Tuesday in the first stage of its application for a permanent headquarters in the harbor.

As a temporary measure, AirWest terminal is being shifted across-harbor to a location immediately north of the present Black Ball terminal.

The company has applied to make this its permanent base and wants to construct a passenger terminal there.

"I have been quoted as being opposed to the application by AirWest and the quote is correct but it was in the context of the labor dispute. Now that the dispute has been solved through negotiation, we (city council) can begin to negotiate about the site and I am confident we can reach a settlement," Ryan said.

Brisk Battle Is Brewing Over Riding Academy Site

A battle is shaping up in Oak Bay for possession of the nine-acre Victoria Riding Academy property, the last parcel of publicly-owned land in the municipality.

Council is divided on what to do with the property and in the end it may well be ratepayers who will settle the issue.

The land to be vacated soon by the owners of the academy, Don and Eileen Carley, could well become an election issue between those who favor either leasing or selling the property to a private developer and those who want the land retained as parkland or for recreation.

Council has commissioned a consultant to study the best economic purpose for the land, but some ratepayers are not satisfied with the terms of reference. They say the study should not only be based on economics but on other values such as esthetics, education and recreation.

They also say the study should also be based on future land needs of the municipality.

David Philip, chairman of the Oak Bay Parks and Recreation Commission, said he was opposed to the land falling into the hands of a private developer.

"When that land goes, there's more of it in the municipality," he said.

He said before any decision is made on what to do with the land, careful consideration should be given to the future recreational needs of Oak Bay.

Already, he said, proposals have been submitted to the commission for a par-three golf course, additional tennis courts and a second tennis bubble in addition to the one at Oak Bay Recreation Centre.

While there was no question of expanding recreational facilities at this time, he said, additional space is needed to look after future recreational needs.

Ald. Shirley Dowell, chairman of the council's finance committee, favors turning over the property on a leasehold basis to a developer who would build luxury two-storey condominiums.

She said the condominiums would sell for about $75,000 and $150,000 and would be set amid broad landscaped areas, in keeping with the site's prime location near Uplands Golf Course and Henderson Park.

Dowell said the municipality would probably put the property out to tender and see which developer came up with the best deal, assuming the condominium route was the one chosen.

Since 1952 when use of the land was first discussed by council, Dowell has favored a housing development on the property. But in 1973 she opposed construction of a highrise on the site.

Conrad Watling, who headed a ratepayer group which opposed a housing development on the property five years ago, said the land should be left alone and landscape for the time being as a parkland.

"This is the last parcel of municipally-owned property and we may need it in the future," he said. "We have enough condominiums and apartments."

In 1972 Farmers Construction Ltd. offered to build a sports centre in the municipality free in return for the nine acres. His plan was to construct three 12-storey highrises and 50 townhouses.

Council turned down the proposal in the face of opposition from Oak Bay residents.

Short, Happy Visit To Another World

max low

One drowsy eye opened.

It saw eight or nine crabs marching up my chest toward my face.

For a brief moment it was like something out of an Alfred Hitchcock movie. I leaped up from the rocky beach and brushed them off.

"What's wrong?" little Silas Hunt said with a straight face. "Don't you like crabs?"

Silas and his dad, Ed Hunt, and the other Indians of Bella Bella were still laughing about it that night at the potluck feast the people of the remote little island put on in the basement of the church for our group from Elsie Miles Elementary School in Shawnigan Lake.

Ostensibly this was a field trip, a learning experience. But it was much more.

For weeks the Grade 4 and 5 students had toiled with bottle drives and bake sales to raise more than $400 to pay for the four-day adventure. And what an adventure it was. Certainly my school days were never like that.

There was a one-day trip (with parents doing the driving) up to Kelsey Bay with a soccer match there and a tour of the fish hatcheries at Big Qualicum on the way.

There was the excitement of an overnight journey on the ferry Queen of Prince Rupert and breakfast at the school in Bella Bella.

There were walks around the dusty stony streets of the island where the almost all-Indian population of 1,200 live; jaunts with fishermen in their long herring punts (that take about four hours to fill with fish and each hold about $6,000 worth of roe) and a picnic lunch at a nearby cove where Old Town Bella Bella stood some 80 years ago.

Then there was that magnificent feast where we dined on baked salmon and smoked ooligans from Bella Coola and hosts of other delights. As young Ricky Hill of Shawnigan said:

"Boy, this is fun, Mr. Low. I've never seen half this food before!"

It was fun, too, and the Shawnigan kids were daring in their experimentation, trying everything from the various kinds of fish and rice dishes to the seaweed they'd seen earlier that day drying on racks outside the homes.

As soon as dinner was over there was a film for them in the cultural centre. But not before they'd had a chance to sit in a circle and hear Beatrice Brown (or Granny Beatrice as the old Indian woman is called) tell stories of old Bella Bella.

Then it was back to a night in sleeping bags on the floor of the Darby Memorial Church, a pancake breakfast put on by their hosts and the thrill of a day-time ferry trip back to Kelsey Bay. That night it was sleeping bags again, this time on the floor of the Sayward School gym, and it was a tired group of kids — and parents — who pulled into Shawnigan by the end of the fourth day.

But in between those drives up and down our island there had been not only a valuable learning experience but an experience of life. Our children had met people who were different and discovered they were warm human beings.

They had learned to count to 10 in the guteral Heiltsuk language and they had made friendships that will last.

They had lived for a day or two in another world — a kind of dreamland where there is hardly a car in sight, for there is hardly anywhere to go. Where no one walks too fast because no one's in too much of a hurry to get there. As head teacher Bradley Hunt (Ed's cousin) said:

"The people live a timeless existence here. We don't encourage it in school but we notice it there. They are never on time. If someone on Bella Bella tells you he'll meet you at a certain time you can expect him to be half an hour either side of it. Clocks just don't mean anything to them."

"Your visit is an all-time first," one woman told us. "Tourists don't come to Bella Bella (the name, incidentally, which was given by Spanish explorers, means Beautiful, Beautiful). Officials of the Department of Indian Affairs are the only ones who come, or perhaps rich people in their boats might drop by."

—Max Low photos

At Bella Bella . . .a sad and happy farewell

And so the trip was not only an exciting one, it was unique. Not many teachers in public schools would tackle such a venture with 24 kids and both that, and the fact that the Shawnigan youngsters left behind as much as they gained, I feel says a lot for their incredible teacher, Judy Latimer.

Her now-famous ukelele band, led by Mrs. Latimer and joined by their friend Padre Harry Pike, not only entertained the boat passengers in the main lounge on the voyage back but took the joyous sound of music to an island starved for such things.

"We don't have music in the school here," Ed Hunt, who with his wife Tillie teaches the Heiltsuk language, said a little sadly.

When it was time to leave, not only all the students but the adults of the village, too, flocked down to the wharf to wave.

There were promises to write, hopes of a return trip to Shawnigan for the Indian students . . . and a genuine sadness to see us go.

Add Mussels To City Scene

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

The sons of a Victoria sports great came home Friday, and look at what they brought with them:

Professional baseball.

Lynn and Jim Chapman, the Victoria-born sons of hall-of-famer Art Chapman, announced that they, along with long-time friend Don Rogelstad, will field a team in the class A Northwest Professional League, bringing pro baseball back to the city after an absence of 25 years.

It's definite, and perhaps a bit of a surprise.

The surprise wasn't intended. The three young men made their move in such a hurry that most of the loose ends weren't tied until the past three weeks. That plus the fact that other recent attempts to re-introduce pro baseball to Victoria ended negatively didn't seem to expedite the need for rumors.

Now it's all settled, so meet Victoria Mussels.

That's the name they'll use.

"We wanted something original," explained Rogelstad, "but something that was indicative of the coast. It has a double meaning which we hope will be appealling."

Victoria's application for a franchise was quickly welcomed by the Northwest League, which already had drawn up its 1978 schedule for a seven-team league. But the addition of a balancing eighth team prompted the Northwest League to work out a new schedule — one which included Victoria.

The Mussels will join Bellingham Mariners, Gray's Harbor Loggers and Walla Walla Padres in the Northern Division of the eight-team league. Eugene Emeralds, Salem Senators, Bend Timberhawks and Boise Buckskins will make up the Southern Division.

Victoria is scheduled to open its 36-game home stand June 21, a Wednesday night, against Bellingham, last year's league champions.

An attempt to place a pro team here failed earlier this year when Van Schley of Los Angeles decided the rental terms for the use of Royal Athletic Park were too high.

"I think Canadians might have a better understanding of labor and economic conditions in Canada better than Americans," said Jim Chapman. "We think the lease arrangement is just fine."

The Chapmans and Rogelstad, quietly optimistic but acknowledging they "have a lot of work to do," came to Friday's media conference quite prepared to supply the answers to all questions. And if the young trio didn't have the answers, they came up with the men who had them.

In addition to fielding Art Chapman, the owners decorated the conference with Bobby Bragan and Bob Freitas. Bragan, a former player and major league pilot with Pittsburgh Pirates, is president of the National Association of Professional Baseball.

Freitas, the NAPB's western director, is a former manager of Vancouver Mounties in the Pacific Coast League. Freitas, who tried "15 or 16 times" to promote a pro franchise for Victoria, seemed especially delighted in Friday's announcement.

Both Bragan and Freitas feel Victoria could be a successful franchise, especially from the standpoint of the calibre of players expected to be available to the Mussels.

Victoria will operate as an independent, without major league affiliation. Four of the other teams in the league enjoy a big-league tieup. They are Bellingham (Seattle Mariners), Bend (Oakland A's), Eugene (Cincinnati) and Walla Walla (San Diego Padres).

"There are 26 major league teams," said Bragan, "who are committed to spend one and a half million dollars in development each year. That means $39 million is available. Last year they drafted 832 players. They were fortunate if they signed 500. There's a great need for teams to absorb some of these players."

Freitas also pointed out that if a major league team assigns a player to a minor league team, the parent club "usually pays the player's salary, and even his travelling and living expenses."

As a "short-season league," the Northwest League is especially attractive to college or high school graduates who must wait until June before playing baseball on a full-time basis.

"We'll be looking at players from Alaska to Mexico," said Jim Chapman, who will serve as the Mussels' playing-manager. "The big thing is that we can wait until the major league draft on June first."

Chapman acknowledge the Mussels will have to work their schedule at Royal Athletic Park around dates already awarded Victoria Budgets, the Canadian senior men's softball champions.

"They were here first," said Jim. "We don't mind. We'll just work our dates around theirs. After all, they are national champions and we're just the new kids on the block."

With Mussels, yet.

BRAGAN

HARNESS RACING LEASE AT SANDOWN

Harness racing at Sandown moved another jump closer this week with the announcement that officials of Orangeville Raceway, operators of the standardbred track at Cloverdale, had signed a long-term lease for the use of Sandown Park.

Only the approval of the B.C. Racing Commission and the provincial cabinet remain to make it official for racing to begin on or about June 3.

The lease for four years, with an option to renew for 16 years, was negotiated with the B.C. Jockey Club, owners of the track.

As indicated earlier, racing will be held on Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings, and Saturday and holidays in the afternoon.

It is planned to hold a 57-day season, ending Sept. 9.

Giveaway Style Worries Howell

PRAGUE (CP) — Canada is still playing giveaway at the world hockey championship and head coach Harry Howell is worried despite an easy 6-2 victory Friday over East Germany, a team promoted from the B division this year and one that will be lucky to win a single game.

But errant passes aren't the only problem for the Canadians who now have a 1-1 record, having lost to Finland 6-4 in their opener the night before. The club has yet to play a full 60 minutes of consistent hockey.

"Once again we ran into a team that we completely outclassed and outplayed in the first period," said Howell. "But the same thing happened as last night. We eased up in the second period. Fortunately the East German team is not of the same calibre as the Finns."

Howell found one small reason for optimism. After their letdown the Canadians came on strongly in the latter part of the third period, something they were unable to do against the Finns.

Wilf Paiement and Marcel Dionne scored two goals each for Canada while defenceman Brad Maxwell and Pat Hickey got the others.

But strangely the Canadians managed to outshoot the East Germans only in the first period, 14-7.

"I'm concerned about our defensive play," said Howell. "We have a system were supposed to be using but its not being done. And it better be straightened out before we play against the good clubs or we'll be in serious trouble."

Howell said the forwards have been giving up the puck and he's mystified as to the reason because its something that has happened only in the last two games.

"In the exhibition games we played we were just about perfect technically," he said, referring to two wins over Sweden and one over Czechoslovakia. "There were perhaps six or seven giveaways in an entire game. Last night (against the Finns) there were 40 and tonight we had about 20. So that's not good but at least its an improvement."

Asked why he had used Denis Herron in goal after Dan Bouchard played the first game, Howell said: "I can't find a No. 1 goaltender. They've both played extremely well and Herron had some really tough chances before they finally scored on him.

In an earlier game Czechoslovakia scored a comeback 6-4 victory over the scrappy Finnish team.

Up-Island Bowlers Muscle In

Up-Island bowlers, for the first time in the history of the 15-year-old Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest, have really made their presence felt this year.

Nearly one-quarter of the bowlers who qualified for the tenpin Bowler-of-the-Year rolloffs by firing the highest three-game scratch series in each week of the 26-week competition are from north of the Malahat.

Both men and women tenpinners will go gunning for cash and trophies at 1 p.m. Sunday at Mayfair Lanes while the fivepin qualifiers will compete at the same time May 7 at Town and Country Lanes.

A total of 10 up-Islanders qualified for the tenpin rolloffs at Duncan Lanes and two division-topping series were rolled at Lake Cowichan Bowling Alley.

Bea Summers, Jean Capella, Sue Stout, Coleen Blacklock, Sally Yates and Gail Cutforth of Duncan and Diane Smith of Lake Cowichan will be gunning for the women's crown while Jim Soon, Bob Willis, George Wellings and Carl Grzech of Duncan and Oke Anderson of Lake Cowichan will compete for the men's title.

Like the regular season, the rolloffs will involve three-game scratch series in all four divisions — men's and women's tenpins and men's and women's fivepins.

All rolloff champions will receive a Times Trophy and any Bowler-of-the-Year winner who is also a daily subscriber to the Victoria Times will receive a bonus prize of $150.

Shamrocks Sign New Defenceman

Victoria Shamrocks soon may be known as the Boston Bolts of the Western Lacrosse Association.

The Shamrocks this week acquired the fifth member of that defunct National Lacrosse Association club with the signing of defenceman Jerry McKenna.

McKenna, six feet, four inches in height and weighing 215 pounds, played with Ivan Thompson, Chris Hall, Larry Bell and Joe McCrea on the Boston team and all now are members of the Shamrocks.

McKenna last year played for Fergus of the Ontario Lacrosse Association and was a pickup player with Brampton Excelsiors in the Mann Cup final.

Shamrocks have three other former eastern players on the roster this year, but two of them, Art Webster and Gord Lyons, who played for Brampton last year, are not yet eligible to play as they have not obtained their releases from the Ontario Lacrosse Association. Scott Marshall is the other import and he is trying out for a goalkeeping spot.

As it stands now, Larry Smeltzer will get the nod in goal for the season's opener against the Mann Cup champion Vancouver Burrards at Memorial Arena, Wednesday night.

Coach Nirmal Dillon hasn't yet made up his mind whether he will use veteran George Grover in the backup role alone or go along with Marshall as well.

The Shamrocks have 26 players in camp and must reduce their roster to 21 on Monday, 48 hours before game time.

It is expected however that the Shamrocks will place some members on the injury list as captain Ranjit Dillon and McCrea are both expected to miss the opener.

Three Invited

Three Victoria players have received invitations to try out for Canada's national soccer team, May 17-24 in Montreal.

They are forward Bob Duncan and midfielder Garnet Moen of Vic West and former Athletic Ian Bridge, a midfielder who played for Maidstone of the English Southern League this season.

25th Anniversary Season At Western Familiar sounds of roaring engines, screeching tires and cheering fans return to tree-shrouded Millstream road this weekend.

The 25th season of auto racing at Western opens Sunday with a super-stock and stock-car program starting with time trials at 2 p.m. Approximately 40 cars, including 16 super-stocks, are expected to time in for the historic quarter-century milestone race.

Most of the top runners of previous seasons will be back although last year's super-stock champion Bob Collins and stock-car champion John Robillard have indicated they won't be camaigning this year.

Returning from a year's layoff is Orton Ker who last year handled the vice-presidential chores for the Vancouver Island Track Racing Association.

Ker drove a 1968 Torino to a fourth-place over-all finish two years ago and expects to do better with the 1974 Camaro he'll drive this season.

"I think Jim Caudwell and I will be battling it out for top spot," says a confident Ker.

Ker may have trouble on opening day, however, as the Camaro engine was missing badly in practice. Ker's crew worked on it Friday but they won't know the results until the hot laps on race day.

Caudwell and Larry Pollard, who is expected to supply serious contention this season, have their cars well prepared. They were both running well under the track record of 18:23 in Thursday's practice. Caudwell, the 1977 points runner-up has a new 1972 Nova to play with while Pollar, returning to the super-stocks after a couple of years campaigning open super-stocks, will drive a new 1974 Nova.

Now Add Nykoluk To Contending List

Times News Services

While his boss Fred Shero has not been talking with Vancouver Canucks, Philadelphia Flyers assistant coach Mike Nykoluk says he wouldn't be averse to taking over the foundering National Hockey League team.

The Canucks have been without a coach since Orland Kurtenbach was fired at the end of the 1977-78 season. There have been a number of names bandied about as to his successor, of which Shero's has been prominent.

However, Canucks general manager Jake Milford said Wednesday the Flyers coach has not been approached about the West Coast job.

But Nykoluk said Friday in Toronto that he's interested in the Vancouver job.

"I feel that having worked with Freddie so closely for so long I've picked up quite a lot that can help me as a coach," Nykoluk said. "It would be no easy task immediately, but then everything takes time."

Speculation also continues to grow on the future of Montreal Canadiens' coach Scotty Bowman with several reports this week having him bound for various other NHL clubs, including Vancouver, after the Stanley Cup playoffs conclude.

"I'm certainly not going to anybody yet this time," Bowman said in an interview. "I haven't got any idea of negotiating with anybody because we are getting ready for the semi-finals," said Bowman, adding that he didn't know how long he wanted to stay in coaching.

There have been other reports recently saying that Bowman was being sought by New York Rangers, St. Louis Blues and Colorado Rockies, in addition to Vancouver.

Still in hockey, Nelson Skalbania of Vancouver will remain the owner of the Indianapolis Racers, although he is trying to bring local partners, and money, into the World Hockey Association franchise. Executive vice-president Don LeRose said Friday "there is absolutely no question that the Indianapolis Racers will operate in the WHA for the 1978-79 season." "Contrary to numerous reports in the past few weeks, Nelson Skalbania is remaining as the owner. . ." LeRose said. "It is true, however, that Nelson has approached a group of interested Indianapolis businessmen to participate in the Racer organization and negotiations are continuing."

In Edmonton, the signing of veteran quarterback Tom Wilkinson to a new two-year contract was announced by Edmonton Eskimos of the Canadian Football League. This will be the seventh season with Eskimos for the 35-year-old product of the University of Wyoming. Wilkinson, who won the most-outstanding-player award for pro football in 1974, is generally regarded as the inspirational leader of the Eskimos but this year faces more competition than ever for the starting job since theEskimos are bringing about half a dozen candidates to training camp. They include Warren Moon, the Rose Bowl hero of University of Washington Huskies.

In England, Nottinghamshire cricketers threatened to refuse to play against teams with players contracted to Kerry Packer's World Series cricket organization.

Packer is the Australian who has launched a series of matches between some of the worlds top players independent of recognized cricket authorities.

The Nottinghamshire players' decision follows the sacking of club captain Clive Rice of South Africa after he signed with Packer last week.

Jack Bannister of the Cricketers Association said on behalf of the Nottinghamshire players: "As we now cannot play with any World Series cricketers on our team, we do not wish to play against them in English competitive cricket."

It now appears that Rice's exclusion, while Kent continues to include Asif Iqbal, Bob Woolmer and Derek Underwood—all Packer players—has made the Nottinghamshire players unhappy. They have, however, agreed not to go ahead with their boycott until after a meeting between the International Cricket Conference, World Series cricket and the Cricketers Association.

Dallas Cowboys cornerback Mel Renfro, who recently cleared waivers and became a free agent, will visit this weekend with three other National Football League teams interested in signing him.

"It wasn't my intention to leave the Cowboys," said the five-time all-pro player, "but according to what happened last year and what's happening in the off season, evidently my services are no longer needed here. I'll find out if my services are needed elsewhere."

BRIEFLY: Talks between horse owners and the Ontario Jockey Club reached an impasse this week and may result in the closing of Ontario's major race tracks next week. . .Members of the Horsemen's Benevolent and Protective Association and the Ontario Harness Horsemen's Association are being asked to withhold entries "commencing Monday, May 1, 1978, and for races commencing Wednesday, May 3." after a breakdown in "prolonged negotiations" with the Ontario Jockey Club that have been continuing since last October. . .Toronto Blue Jays of the American Baseball League have traded infielder Tim Nordbrok to Milwaukee Brewers for infielder Tim Johnson. . .Detroit Lions of the National Football League have acquired linebacker Dave Washington from San Francisco '49ers. . . And hockey's Minnesota North Stars have obtained right winger Pierre Plante from Chicago Black Hawks, completing an earlier trade which sent Doug Hicks to Chicago.

Out of Frying Pan Right Into the Fire

By The Associated Press

Washington Bullets have fought their way out of the frying pan. Now they head directly into the fire.

The Bullets, with reserve guards Larry Wright and Charles Johnson combining for 30 points, edged San Antonio Spurs 103-100 Friday night to win their National Basketball Association quarter-final playoff series 4-2.

But the Bullets won't get very long to enjoy their victory. They must return to action Sunday for the opener of the Eastern Conference championship series against Philadelphia 76ers. Philadelphia, which will have the home-court advantage for the first two games, swept New York Knicks in four straight in its quarter-final.

"Let me savor this for awhile," pleaded Washington coach Dick Motta after his club eliminated the Central Division champion Spurs.

Meanwhile, in the Western Conference, Denver Nuggets blew a chance to wrap up their quarter-final series at home when they bowed to Milwaukee Bucks 117-112. The series now shifts to Milwaukee on Sunday with Denver leading 3-2.

Seattle SuperSonics lead the defending champion Portland Trail Blazers 3-1 in the other quarter-final series, which resumes Sunday in Seattle.

Reserve forward Mark Olberding led San Antonio with 24 points and NBA scoring champ George Gervin had 23.

"We can't complain," said a dejected San Antonio coach Doug Moe. "When you get beat because you can't put the ball in the hole, you can't say a thing."

Milwaukee guard Brian Winters couldn't put the ball in the hole in the first half, scoring only two points. But he scored 21 in the second half to help the Bucks upset Denver as Milwaukee scored 39 points in the fourth quarter.

Whalers Grab Opener

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — "It's only a start," conceded Whalers coach Harry Neale after New England whipped Quebec Nordiques 5-1 in the first game of the best-of-seven semi-final series in the World Hockey Association Friday night.

"Everything we tried to do worked tonight," said Neale.

Neale appointed Whalers winger Dan Bolduc to follow Mark Tardif, the WHA's regular-season scoring champion with 154 points. Tardif, unable to shake Bolduc, did not score a point.

"Having a shadow is nothing new for Tardif...Every team always puts someone on him," Filion said.

Filion said he hoped his team would be in better form after a quick trip home to Quebec.

"We weren't in the game from the first minute. I could tell that because we only went for the puck and we never went for the body.

New England controlled Friday night's game, outshooting Quebec 28-13 over the first two periods while building up a 3-0 lead.

Marke Howe, Ron Plumb, Mike Rogers, George Lyle and Jack Carlson scored for New England.

Denver Warrants Big League Team

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn says he expects a major league franchise in Denver "within the next year or two." Kuhn said he and his frequent antagonist, Oakland A's owner Charlie Finley, "worked shoulder to shoulder" in a futile effort to move the A's to Denver this season.

Two teams in the Bay area are one too many, the commissioner said, and the fast-growing Denver area deserves major league treatment.

SOCCER STAR FINED

BIRMINGHAM, England (Reuter) — Phil Thompson, the Liverpool and England defender, was fined $555 by the English Football Association's disciplinary commission for criticizing refereee Pat Patridge after Nottingham Forest beat Liverpool in the League Cup final.

Surprise Leader

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The surprise leader at the halfway point, longshot rookie D.A. Weibring, isn't even thinking about winning the $200,000 New Orleans Open Golf Tournament.

But Gary Player and Lee Trevino are.

"Now it looks like I'll have to shoot something like 67—67 to win," mused Trevino after his second-round 70 had dropped him two shots behind Weibring after 36 holes.

"I'm trying to win four in a row," said a grim-faced Player. "And if I make it, I'll be trying to win five in a row."

The little South African, whose dramatic comebacks have produced three consecutive victories and captured the imagination of the golfing world, shot a 67 in pursuit of a fourth consecutive triumph, a feat that was last accomplished 26 years ago.

"I'm not even thinking of winning," said Weibring, 24. "There's no way I can be favored with Trevino and Player right there. I'm honored to be in such company. I'll just try to play well, play intelligently and let things fall where they may."

They fell right for him in Friday's second round. He fired an eight-under-par 64 that matched the course record on the Lakewood Country Club layout and represented the best score of his brief pro career.

Ehret Out Front

ALTANTA (AP) — Gloria Ehret, trying to snap a five-year drought, fired a four-under-par 69 Friday and took the first-round lead in the $75,000 Lady Tara golf tournament.

Ehret, playing extremely well in the swirling winds that generally forced high scores, enjoyed a one-shot advantage over the hilly 6,353-yard Brookfield West Country Club course.

There was a three-way tie for second at 70 among Roberta Speer, Amy Alcott, winner of last week's Ladies Professional Golf Association event at Raleigh, N.C., and Judy Clark, a 28-year-old rookie appearing in her eighth professional tournament.

Ehret has won two titles in her 14 years on tour, the Birmingham event five years ago and the LPGA championship in 1966, her sophomore season.

She tapped in birdie putts in the 12-to-15-foot range on the seventh, eighth and 18th holes, had another birdie by two-putting from 20 feet on the 17th hole and added another from two feet on the fourth green.

Three others were deadlocked at 71—Joyce Kazmierski, Kathy Farrer and Janet Coles.

Eight players were deadlocked at 72, including Carol Mann, playing in her second tournament this year, and Penny Pulz, third leading money-winner this year.

Also at 72 was Louise Bruce, a native of Toronto.

Dale Shaw of Victoria had a 76, including a 35 on the front nine, while Sandra Post, former Oakville, Ont., resident now living in Florida, had a 79 Jocelynne Bourassa of Shawinigan, Que., fired an 86.

Zisk Proving to be Bargain for Texas

By The Associated Press

When Texas Rangers shelled out $2.8 million to sign free agent Richie Zisk to a 10-year contract, they were expecting a clean-up hitter who would belt home runs, drive in runs and produce in the clutch.

And that's exactly what they've gotten.

Zisk, who hit a two-run single in the sixth inning, belted a two-run homer in the 11th Friday night to give the Rangers a 5-4 victory over Boston Red Sox. It was his seventh home run of the season, tying him for the American League lead, and his third game-winning homer. He has driven in 19 runs in 17 games.

The Red Sox had taken a 4-3 lead in the top of the 11th when Carlton Fisk raced home on a throwing error by Texas second baseman Bump Wills. But Zisk's homer, off Boston reliever Bill Campbell, 1-2, sent Texas to its fourth victory in a row and fifth in the last six games.

"He has always been a super clutch RBI man," said Texas' Al Oliver, who preceded the game-winning homer with a bloop single to lead off the 11th. "It didn't surprise me at all."

Montreal Expos, meanwhile, discovered a new way of scoring runs to highlight a zany evening in the National League.

Houston Astros protested its 6-3 loss to Montreal after they were hit with consecutive run-scoring balks.

Then over in Atlanta, the Cubs committed three errors on one play but still nipped the Braves 4-3 in 10 innings.

Montreal scored twice on a pair of controversial balks by Houston reliever Tom Dixon, causing the Astros to play the game under protest.

With runners on second and third in the fifth inning, first base umpire Joe West called balks on consecutive pitches that resulted in a heated five-minute discussion with Houston manager Bill Virdon. West ruled that Dixon's left foot was in front of the rubber and therefore he was in a set position prior to his pitches.

Chicago's comedy of errors began when with runners on first and third Houston's Brian Asselstine grounded to second.

Manny Trillo fielded the ball and threw to shortstop Ivan DeJesus, who was charged with his first error for stepping off the bag before the catch. He then committed a second error by throwing wildly to first. First baseman Dave Kingman's throw to the plate was off-target for the third error.

BOYER SELECTED TO PILOT CARDINALS

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Ken Boyer, manager of Rochester Red Wings of the International League and a former major league player, has been named manager of St. Louis Cardinals of the National League.

August A. Busch Jr., chairman of the board and president of the team, said in a brief statement that Boyer was chosen "after consideration of a number of candidates."

"We have come to the conclusion that Ken Boyer is the best choice available," Busch said. "We are confident that he will bring to the job the same skill and dedication that made him an outstanding player and successful minor league manager."

Boyer was reported to be with the Red Wings in Charleston, W.Va., preparing for a Friday game.

Cougars Without All-Star

Players from Brandon Wheat Kings and Portland Winter Hawks dominated the balloting while Victoria Cougars failed to land on player on the 1977-78 Western Canada Hockey League All-Star teams.

The teams were announced Friday.

The Kings and Hawks, who finished one-two in the league's over-all points race during the regular season but were both eliminated in the first playoff round, each placed two players on both the first and second all-star squads to claim eight of the 12 positions on the two teams.

Seattle Breakers, who failed to make the playoffs during the final weekend of the season, had three players selected.

Goaltender Tim Thomlison was chosen as the top netminder in the voting by the 12 WCHL coaches, making him the only Billings Bighorn on either the first or second squad.

Brian Young of New Westminster Bruins and Keith Brown of Portland tied for the final defensive spot.

The all-star teams:

Perspectives and Prejudices

By Rev. J. A. Davidson

In recent years many people who have had an active affiliation with a church or other religious institution have abandoned that affiliation and now live without any formal religious relationship. Some of these people say that they have been emancipated from the false and outworn interpretations of life which are offered by conventional religion.

But what, really, is involved in current losses of faith? Are people abandoning the kind of faith that entails a special way of seeing human existence and of coming to terms with basic human concerns and predicaments?

In Peter de Vries's novel of a few years ago, Mackerel Plaza, the hero is the Rev. Andrew Mackerel, a flashy young minister, exuberantly radical in his religious thinking and far-out, to the point of dottiness, in devising schemes for appealing to the sophisticated people in the affluent community in which his church is located. But Mackerel's personal faith is a rather fragile thing, and when he eventually loses it the author comments that it is "like losing an artificial leg in an accident."

This novel is an exercise in caricature, but it is caricature that illuminates some of the problems of faith today. The kind of faith that had been embraced by Mackerel is, I suppose, innocent enough — that is one doesn't count on it for any real help when life becomes rough with one. I find it difficult to be distressed by the apparent widespread loss of this kind of faith today — although such losses may for a time seriously inconvenience the churches and other religious institutions.

But not all faith is gimmickry. The biblical faith of the Judaeo-Christian heritage can reach the depths of life and provide perspectives and insights which help a person to meaning and purpose and fulfilment. The artificial-leg kind of faith cannot do that.

The creative kind of faith is not something you can fabricate for yourself while you sit in an easy-chair and think about "life" and "destiny" and "God" and all that — although, to be sure, faith does demand of us our most rigorous thinking.

The kind of faith that counts is hammered out in the experiences of life, and it becomes a special way of seeing and responding to life's challenges and predicaments. it is a matter of seeing life — life in general and one's own life — in a special way. This way in faith provides its own validations; in it proof and practice must go together.

Perhaps history will show that this kind of faith was served in the closing decades of the 20th century by the evaporation of the kinds of faith which are easy and superficial and have little to do with life's deepest concerns.

Mayor, council at anniversary

Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier and several alderman attended divine worship in St. Mark's Church, Boleskine Road, for the church's 86th anniversary.

The mayor and alderman were invited to attend the service in order that they might know that the churches pray for them in their difficult work. Those accepting the church's invitation were Ald. Mary Casilio, Howard Sturrock and Geoffrey Vantreight.

Rector Peter Isles briefly outlined the history of the church. Special preacher, the Rev. H. Gordon Walker, spoke on the importance of handing on Christian traditions. Soloist Maureen Ross sang I Know That My Redeemer Liveth.

At a reception which followed, greetings came from Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis and the mayor who wished the congregation a happy birthday and success in the future. A large birthday cake was supplied by Mrs. Chris Birtwistle who has held continuous membership in the church for more than 60 years.

Easter eggs Orthodox-style

Rev. Gleb Jensen and three-year-old daughter Christine, members of Holy Theopohany Parish of the Russian Orthodox Church, 3801 Cadboro Bay, prepare Easter eggs and baskets for Julian-calendar midnight service. Symbols of the resurrection of Christ and new life, the eggs are usually dyed red, exchanged among the people and cracked to accompaniment of paschal greeting "Christ is risen! He is risen indeed!"

Red Shield tally best ever in 1977

The Salvation Army says the 1977 Red Shield Appeal was the most successful ever held in Greater Victoria with a total of $181,809.49 raised.

Objective for the 1978 Red Shield Appeal will be $180,000.

The figures are contained in the Army's annual report for Victoria and Vancouver Island.

In a condensed financial statement, the balanced budget shows $1,365,000 was spent. This included expenditures on corps community centres, correctional services, family welfare, Harbour Light centre, men's social service centre, hostel/welfare (Nanaimo), League of Mercy, Matson Lodge, national services and extension, and public relations.

Income was derived from fees for service, grants, Thrift Store earnings, donations and members' contributions, Red Shield Appeal, Christmas cheer and welfare fund.

The financial summary does not include legacies, trust funds and gifts designated for capital purposes because it is the Salvation Army's policy to credit these funds to the principles of such accounts.

The Salvation Army began its work in Victoria on June 26, 1887. The 90th year of service was marked last summer by the visit to Victoria of General-elect and Mrs. Commissioner Arnold Brown on their way to International Headquarters in London, England, to direct the army's activities in 83 countries around the world.

The are several Army corps on Vancouver Island.

Lt. Colonel Harold Sharp, divisional commander, notes in his report that the militant term 'corps' describes centres where soldiers or members of the Salvation Army Church, together with many others gather for worship, instruction in Christian living and fellowship.

The annual report notes part of the Army's story in 1977:

- Shelter was given to 20,796 men and meals to 39,057 through the Men's Social Service hostels;
- Counsel and treatment were provided for 118 alcoholics; 35,554 meals were served and 26,937 persons attended meetings at the Harbour Light Centre;
- Visits were made to 25,379 patients in hospitals and institutions by a League of Mercy volunteer;
- There were 1,833 interviews with men and women in court and prisons; 234 persons were assisted with legal aid and 72 Chapel services and Bible studies were conducted;
- Thirteen unmarried mothers were given supportive care and practical help in the Army's home;
- The Army's senior citizens residences offered solace to 212 men and women "in the sunset years of their lives;"
- The facilities and program of the Army's summer camp were shared by 107 persons; 4,863 were helped through the Family Services program; 1,705 families received help for Christmas; 13 individuals were successfully reunited with their families and 112 persons were assisted in finding employment.

NEW ARMY APPEAL STARTS WITH 'BLITZ' THIS MONTH

The Salvation Army's annual Red Shield Appeal will be held during the month of May throughout Greater Victoria with the residential "BLITZ" canvass scheduled for the evening of Monday, May 1.

The campaign will be launched on Sunday in co-operation with McDonald's Restaurants and the four Victoria radio stations.

Harry Young, the general campaign chairman, announced that the objective of $180,000 will make possible the continuance of Salvation Army services in the community for the next year. It is essential that this amount be realized to meet the operating deficit on the Army's social service institutions and other humanitarian services which provided practical help and care to more than 60,000 needy persons last year.

Capt. Stan Ratcliffe, campaign director, expressed confidence in the local citizens.

Ghetto memory wins support

TORONTO (CP) — Christian church leaders in Toronto are endorsing and supporting the Jewish community's plans to observe the 35th anniversary of the Warsaw ghetto uprising.

In response to an invitation from the holocaust remembrance committee of the Toronto Jewish Congress, a number of clergymen have said they will attend a rally in the city's downtown area April 30. A memorial service also will be held May 3.

"I consider the recollection of the holocaust and what it stands for in human tragedy and evil, of great significance," Rev. W. Clarke MacDonald, deputy secretary of the United Church of Canada, said.

"I am particularly aware that this has added poignancy for the Jewish community, but we all share their sense of tragedy and loss."

Political leaders also are planning to participate. Larry Grossman, Ontario minister of consumer and commercial relations, will represent Premier William Davis. Opposition Leader Stuart Smith and former NDP leader Stephen Lewis also will attend.

Speakers at the rally include Rabbi Dr. W. Gunther Plaut, president of the Canadian Jewish Congress, and Dr. Franklin H. Littell of Temple University in Philadelphia, a Christian authority on the holocaust.

Blunt General Agrees To Quit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Outspoken Maj.-Gen. John K. Singlaub agreed today to retire from the U.S. Army after his second public blast at President Carter's policies.

Brig.-Gen. Robert Solomon, the army's information chief, told reporters that Singlaub "agreed to retire" following a meeting that Singlaub had this morning with Army Secretary Clifford Alexander and Gen. Bernard Rogers, army chief of staff. The army officials had ordered Singlaub to fly to Washington after they learned that Singlaub in a speech Thursday had blasted Carter's decision not to produce the neutron warhead and had disagreed publicly with the Panama canal treaties.

Last year, Singlaub was reassigned from a top job in South Korea after criticizing to a reporter Carter's decision to withdraw U.S. ground troops from Korea.

Solomon said Gen. Frederick Kroesen, Singlaub's boss at the Army Forces Command headquarters in Atlanta, had recommended to Alexander and Rogers that Singlaub "be permitted to retire."

The army spokesman did not say what Alexander and Rogers did after receiving Kroesen's recommendation, but it was evident that all parties had agreed to resolve the situation in that way. Kroesen accompanied Singlaub to the Pentagon.

The much-decorated Singlaub, a combat veteran of the Second World War, Korea and Vietnam, is 56 years old and has completed more than 35 years of military service. He is eligible for retirement at three-quarters of his active duty pay for life.

Solomon indicated the date of Singlaub's retirement was not yet definite. Having suffered wounds in battle, he could claim some degree of disability benefits and this normally is determined by a medical board before a military officer actually retires.

Singlaub's remarks on the neutron warhead and the Panama canal were made Thursday to ROTC cadets at Georgia Tech.

CLIMBERS ESCAPE SLIDE

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — A search effort at nearby Cascade Mountain ended happily Thursday when two persons seen climbing the mountain just before a snow slide hit reported safely to authorities.

Andy Anderson, chief warden for Parks Canada, said when the two persons heard on the radio that a rescue operation was under way to search for them, they came back to tell authorities they were not in any trouble.

The search began after witnesses reported seeing two people climbing in the area shortly before tons of snow fell about 600 metres. Rescue workers and two specially-trained dogs were sent to search the area.

He said the two people were walking out to the highway when they heard the snow come crashing down.

Bid to Get Report Budget Fails

If Victoria aldermen don't get individual publishing budgets, opposing points of view may perish before they ever make it to the public, Ald. Robin Blencoe argued Thursday night.

Blencoe failed in his attempts to win support for a proposal that each alderman be allocated $155 annually to publish reports on topics of interest.

He argued that in a democratic system opposing ideas were a necessity and it was the right of the public to know where aldermen stood on various issues.

Blencoe recently dipped into his own pocket to make copies of a report he'd compiled on the topic of team policing.

Blencoe attempted to overturn a finance committee recommending against establishment of an annual publication budget.

At the committee stage he'd got into hot water by saying that some aldermen could well afford to print their reports, but the poorer aldermen on council couldn't.

Ald. Ron McKenzie, who owns an office equipment retail store, took exception to Blencoe's remarks at that time and threatened a possible law suit over it.

Thursday, in the meeting at the new Victoria West community centre, Blencoe said he was in a conciliatory mood — and then went on to blast council for trying to suppress dissenting opinions.

McKenzie had proposed that if aldermen wanted to get their reports published for distribution they should first come before council for approval. Unworthy documents, he said could then be rejected, while those getting support from the majority would be paid for by council.

That motion eventually won out.

"If an individual's opinions run contrary to the majority viewpoint on council, his minority submission could very well never be heard in full by the public," Blencoe said.

An attempt by Ald. John Hayes to reach a compromise failed dismally.

Hayes suggested that council should earmark funds that would be used to pay the costs whenever any member of the public requested a copy of a report.

He said if a member of the public wanted a report City Hall had a duty to provide it no matter what the cost.

AROUND THE GALLERIES

Circle Craft Society will have moved as of Monday from the former old-time grocery store at 434 Kingston, to a new location at 69 Bastion Square. Currently they are seeking good creative craftspeople for participation in their famous Fibres Festival. This is to take place at the Empress Hotel, June 16—18, and will have a completely new format this year.

A week of workshops at Circle Craft's new home will set the stage for the exhibition, which is to be staged on a consignment basis, and not as a fair or market.

"Therefore," says co-ordinator Precille Boisvert, "we are particularly interested in the special, creative and exciting piece rather than in production-type items. For instance, clothing, wall-hangings, sculptures, toys are among the things we would like to see."

During the Festival there will be a series of performances by Shirley Rolland and the set-up of the exhibition will be co-ordinated by famous Canadian fabrics artist Carole Sabiston.

Open Space Gallery is delighted to announce the receipt of grants totalling $42,600 for its new Sound Collaboratory program. Of this amount, $12,600 was given by the B.C. Cultural Fund and $30,000 by Canada Council's visual arts section.

Sound, the first of the six weeks of programs at 510 Fort, opened this week. This will deal with all aspects of sonic exploration and is open to participation by anyone interested in exploring sound as an art form. Co-ordinator for Sound is UVic's composer-musician John Celona.

Each Collaboratory will deal with a separate theme, Light following Sound, succeeded by Polaroid, and Satellite-Telephone-Computer. The program continues through June 4.

At University of Victoria's new Maltwood Art Museum and Gallery in the University Centre, Photographs of the Northwest Coast Indians, a travelling exhibition put together by the National Museum of Man in Ottawa, will be on view from Monday through May 19. Open hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. weekdays only.

Alberta Choir

The Concert Choir, an outstanding group of singers from the University of Alberta, will be presented in concert at St.John's Anglican Church, Sunday at 8 p.m.

Directed by Larry Cook, the choir has been touring Western Canada with outstanding success and is making plans for an early European tour. Admission is by program purchasable at the door.

KWOK MAY-LING . . . studies at Indiana

More Honors For May-Ling

One of the most brilliant and moving young pianists to emerge in Victoria Music Festivals of a few years ago was Kwok May-Ling, a vivacious teen-ager who came from her native Hong Kong to study with Robin Wood at the Victoria Conservatory of Music.

After winning many honors in Canada, including the Victoria Festival Medallion and the B.C. Music Festival, May-Ling went to study at the University of Indiana with Gyorgy Sebok, famed pianist who played here this season with the Victoria Symphony. Word received this week is that she is now making waves at Indiana, considered one of, if not the finest, music study centres in North America.

Recently, following a preliminary hearing by a faculty committee, May-Ling was unanimously nominated to be awarded a performance certificate, in itself an unusual honor. This resulted in her giving a performance for the piano faculty, a recital which was termed "magnificent" by faculty members who are traditionally sparing of such accolades.

Following the recital she was besieged with questions about where she came from and who she had studied with, and was told by one professor that her performance of the Chopin 4th Ballade was the "best he had ever heard."

She was also urged to consider international competition by faculty members who have served on the juries for such competitions. May-Ling, ever diffident about her accomplishments, expressed doubt that she had achieved that level but was told, "we hear many fine technical performances as jurists, but seldom anyone who has what you have."

Fish Pact Signed

TOKYO (Reuter) — Canada and Japan have signed an agreement regulating Japanese fishing operations in the 200-mile fishing zone declared by Ottawa last year, the Japanese foreign ministry said Friday.

The two governments started negotiations last July on a bilateral fishing agreement to allow the Japanese to continue fishing on a stable basis in the Canadian zone.

Brazilians Flock to Police Crime Film

BRASILIA (AP) — Lucio Flavio, a notorious bank robber slain in a Rio de Janeiro prison after exposing police links to the underworld, is the real-life model for a Brazilian film drawing large crowds.

Directed by Argentine-born Hector Babenco, the film portrays police complicity in crime as well as the activities of Brazilian death squads.

Release of the film in 100 theatres coincides with a national concern for police abuses, an issue tied to both human rights protests and demands for a relaxation of military control of the country.

Lucio Flavio was shown here recently in an auditorium of Congress. The film was viewed seven times in 10 days by federal police censors, Babenco said. They made three cuts, all scenes of sexual nudity.

"I knew they would cout those scenes," Babenco said. "But the cuts do not affect the impact of the film."

Justice Minister Armando Falcao, who administers film censorship, has been reported to have asked for a copy of the film to be sent to him so that he can see it. It will not be released in this capital until April.

Soprano Gives Concert

ALLISON
. . . at Belfry

Ms. Allison will be heard in a solo concert at The Belfry, Tuesday at 8 p.m.

Possessor of a clear, warm and highly flexible voice, Ms. Allison will perform demanding works from the coloratura repertoire, including songs by Purcell, Faure, Brahms and Schubert and some of Richard Strauss' most virtuosic lieder. She will be accompanied at the piano by Rupert Lang, an accomplished musician and composer who has worked extensively in both Canada and Britain.

Ms. Allison graduated from the University of Manitoba in 1973, gaining the highest marks given to that date in her graduating recital. In addition to her studies in England, she has performed many recitals there and in the spring of 1977 was invited by the Glyndebourne Festival Opera to understudy the title role in Richard Strauss' Die Schweigsame Frau, considered possibly the most demanding coloratura role ever written.

Reserved seats at $3.50 ($3 for students, including Conservatory of Music and UVic students, and for senior citizens) can be obtained by calling The Belfry, 385-6815. The Belfry is at 1291 Gladstone and parking is available in the Victoria High School lots on Gladstone off Chambers.

Kojak Comes To Russia

TALLINN, U.S.S.R. (AP) — The glossy world of Western television has attracted a huge following in Soviet Estonia, where viewers need only a rooftop antenna to pull in shows like Kojak, Peyton Place and Charlie's Angels from stations in nearby Finland.

Nowhere else in the Soviet Union can foreign television programs be seen and understood, and the Western TV habit has clearly caught on in Estonia's capital.

Citizens snap up copies of Finnish Communist newspapers to tear out television listings and even children can understand the programs because the Estonian and Finnish languages are so similar.

"The fact that our schoolchildren are watching Kojak on TV doesn't please me," said Enn Anupold, chief of the Soviet Union's own TV network in Estonia. "It's just violence. We would rather they watched concerts or theatrical programs on our television."

But many people believe the competition from Finland, just 60 miles away, has helped improve the Estonia network's own programs.

Summer Symphony Concerts Lost?

audrey johnson

A great many people around this city during the coming summer, ears stretched for the sounds of symphony music coming freely from outdoor gathering places, are probably going to be deeply disappointed.

It's altogether possible that those enjoyable three-a-week-plus-Sunday promenade concerts that turned tourists on so strongly during past Julys and Augusts, will not be back in the summer of '78.

For six summers, since former Victoria Symphony maestro Laszlo Gati initiated the idea and formed the Victoria Summer Festival Society in 1972, the Victoria Symphony has been the source of a summer orchestra conducted by Gati, and last summer by Timothy Vernon and Gordon Munford, in back-to-back sunset concerts in Heritage Court, Centennial Square and Market Square and in various parks in the Greater Victoria area.

The response from the beginning was tremendous. Standing ovations from audiences of thousands, a flood of letters from delighted visitors who found the concerts added in great measure to Victoria's reputation for being delightfully "different", were received year after year. Gati, in founding the summer series, was able to attract grants from the B.C.Cultural Fund, Canada Council, and the municipalities. In the summer of '76 he obtained a sizable grant from Abacus Cities to do some concerts in Market Square, and these packed the square with people, even on a drizzly evening.

Everything came up plusses. The symphony society profited because a lot of people met the symphony and its music for the first time. Certainly the city core, about which there is so much concern, could only benefit over the course of time.

So why are we now faced with the cutting out of this six-year Victoria summer attraction? Anybody's first guess will be correct — money.

At the moment it appears the Symphony Society will end its current season somewhat more than $100,000 in the red!

In 1976 both the government and municipalities made it clear that they did not wish to fund two separate organizations providing symphony concerts and would prefer that the summer festival be taken under the wing of the Symphony Society. So the candle was snuffed on the Victoria Summer Festival with the understanding that future grants would cover both seasons.

The most recent (1978) grant of $94,500 from the provincial government's cultural fund was thus intended to cover the summer, as well as the winter series of concerts. In the view of Tom Fielding, executive director of the B.C. Cultural Program, the Symphony Society is morally obligated, though not legally, to follow through on that understanding.

However, says symphony manager Jean Hunter in letters to Grace McCarthy and Sam Bawlf (having failed in several attempts to make appointments with the two cabinet ministers), the money available is not enough to meet the costs of this year's summer series. According to her letter, requests to the special Captain Cook bicentenary funding committee have elicited no response except some vague reference to the sum of $1,000 which, she points out, would not even cover one rehearsal cost.

"The fact is," the letter states, "that if we are to mount our usual portion of the summer festival in Victoria, our costs for rehearsals, performances, conductors and production would be in the neighborhood of $65,000, a figure which in a year in which our deficit is already currently standing at $100,000, would quite likely put the Victoria Symphony out of business."

A letter has also gone out this week from the society to all members of the Downtown Businessmen's Association requesting a donation from each firm of $100.

Mrs. Hunter says a substantial number of the professional core of the Victoria Symphony will be available this summer, which means that the orchestra, instead of being patched together from various sources, will be, in effect, the Victoria Symphony, even if of somewhat smaller size. The musicians have agreed to a reduction in fee for the summer, but apart from this item there are costs that have increased as has everything else — costs connected with production, technical matters and promotion.

It will be interesting to see what sort of response is forthcoming from city business firms. Logically they should be among the first to hop on the bandwagon seeing they undoubtedly have a lot to gain from something that adds materially to the attraction not only of downtown but of the city generally. However, they have proved to be a shortsighted group in the past, so symphony officials should not get their hopes too high.

As to the Captain Cook bicentennial funds for entertainment projects, it is my understanding that these funds — not large in the first place — have been long gone.

So now the crunch comes back to where it should have been recognized and engaged from the beginning — with the 20 members of the Victoria Symphony board of directors. Aside from a small handful, particularly honorary treasurer Michael Field and honorary secretary Michael J. Whittaker, who have worked like Trojans, the rest of the board generally seems to have been completely flaccid about fund-raising, managing not much more than $4,000 in their most recent "major" effort.

Some members of the board are even quoted as having said that they did not see fund-raising to be the board's business.

It would be interesting to know what these people think is the board's business. The symphony's operation could be run perfectly well by the manager and staff with the music director and three-person executive. The board is unnecessary if it is not prepared to act in a support capacity, the most important part of which is fund-raising. Lacking the energy and will to espouse its proper role, it becomes a mere collection of dead wood cluttering the scene — no, on second thoughts, not even that, for many of the current board members are frequently not even on the scene.

Funding agencies are not enthusiastic about extending additional aid to organizations that are making a poor show of self-help, so if Victorians miss their outdoor symphonies this summer they should be aware of where the real failure lies.

And for those who may feel injured by what has been said here — well let them look to their record and ask themselves honestly if they have performed well — or even at all!

Twisting the Legend

TORONTO — Actor Tony Curtis, who recently also has become a novelist, says he does not mind being a legend in his own time but that at least two parts of the legend are false.

Curtis, in Toronto to publicize his first novel, Kid Andrew Cody and Julie Sparrow, said he doubts that his denials will do any good.

He said that in one of his earlier swashbuckler movies, he never uttered the words "Yonda lies da castle o' my fodda" in his native New York City accent.

Curtis, the former Bernie Schwartz of the Bronx, said in an interview Thursday that "what I said was, Yonder lies the castle of my father."

Actress Debbie Reynolds made up the Bronx version of the line for fun while on a television talk show, Curtis, 52, said.

"She pinned it on me, and the line broke everybody up.

"The comics adopted it, and it's become part of the folklore of our time—but it just isn't true."

Hirohito Marks Birthday

The emperor, made four appearances on a second floor balcony of the palace during the morning to wave to the wellwishers from behind a bullet proof glass shield.

He was accompanied by Empress Nagako and other members of the imperial family including Crown Prince Akihito and Princess Michiko.

Police said some 28,000 people had entered the palace gates to shout "banzai!" (long life) to Hirohito as of 11 a.m.

Freedom Bid for Isabel

BUENOS AIRES — Former Argentine president Isabel Peron's lawyer asked the military government Friday to halt her trials by civilian judges in five cases of alleged corruption, saying they amount to holding her in double jeopardy.

Julio Arriola said Mrs. Peron, imprisoned since her ouster 25 months ago, is under investigaton by military authorities for the same offences.

There is no immediate reply by the public prosecutor to Arriola's petition, presented a day after 66 prominent Peronists issued a statement saying the courts' delay in announcing their verdicts violated Mrs. Peron's human rights. They called for her release.

Mrs. Peron was elected vice-president and succeeded her husband, Juan, when he died in July, 1974. Her 21 months in office were marked by guerrilla fighting and economic chaos.

She is being held in a chalet at a navy base 400 kilometres south of Buenos Aires while five judges try her cases on the basis of written testimony presented in closed courtrooms.

The charges against her include irregularities in the constuction of a mausoleum for her late husband, pocketing donations meant for flood victims and diverting other public funds to private accounts. None of the trials is finished. The prosecutor in one of the cases asked last week for a six-year prison sentence.

Teamster Leaders Cleared of Fraud

DETROIT — A U.S. district court jury Friday acquitted Richard Fitzsimmons, son of Teamsters president Frank Fitzsimmons, on charges of embezzling $5,000 from a Teamsters fund.

The jury deliberated for several hours before returning verdicts of not guilty for Fitzsimmons, Anthony Sciarotta and Stuart Sinai.

Sciarotta is a Teamsters business agent in Pontiac. Sinai is a Detroit lawyer. Fitzsimmons is a Teamsters organizer in Detroit.

Fitzsimmons was accused in an indictment of embezzling $5,000 in 1972 from a severance fund to buy personal insurance policies for himself and more than 20 other Teamsters officials.

Contributors to the fund were members of Teamsters Local 299 in Detroit. The fund was designed to provide severance pay for employees of the local if they left their jobs.

Sciarotta was charged with embezzlement. Sinai was charged with attempting to cover up the alleged scheme by back-dating the insurance policies.

Drop Bus Charters Plan Dies

Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis confirmed Friday that the provincial government recently quashed a plan by British Columbia Hydro directors to dispose of Pacific Stage Lines sightseeing and charter operations.

The move came to light Thursday when the Amalgamated Transit Union, representing Hydro transit system workers, revealed it had obtained a copy of a confidential letter dated March 22 from then Transport Minister Jack Davis to Premier Bill Bennett.

Curtis denied Thursday that the government was planning to sell its PSL and Vancouver Island Coach Lines services but said Friday that "the directors (of Hydro), operating in their isolation, wanted to dispose of the agency."

He said he intervened when he learned of the proposed move and got the government to suggest that the directors shelve the plans, at least until a complete survey on urban transit in the province is carried out.

"I said 'look, Bill (Bennett), we're pulling this thing together and don't want people flying off unilaterally when in fact that (selling the operations) could be the wrong thing to do'," Curtis said.

He said he expects an interim report on the transit situation at the end of May and a full report in July.

Davis, fired as minister of energy, transport and communications by Bennett on April 3, said in his letter that Hydro directors had decided to phase out the PSL services during the fall and to terminate its Grey Line sightseeing franchise.

The letter says that the move will leave about 50 regular operators and 10 office employees redundant but adds that at current attrition rates "all these employees can be absorbed into other Hydro operations in 1978."

It says PSL's charter revenue in 1977 was about $316,000, but in order to break even in the future "rates would have to be increased from $27.50 to $45 for the first hour."

Daily charter rates would have to rise to $330 from $275.

"Presumably private operators taking over this business would not have to charge rates as high as this because they pay lower wage rates, work a 40-hour week and are not caught up in the same overtime arrangements as B.C. Hydro's operations are," said Davis in his letter to the premier.

Bus Drivers Vote on Pact

Bus drivers here and in Vancouver will vote Thursday on a tentative contract settlement with British Columbia Hydro.

Al Ashton, president of the Amalgamated Transit Union (ATU), said Friday the proposed contract would provide a 10.2-per-cent wage increase during the next 20 months, but does not include the union demand for a reduction in the work week.

"We're not happy with the results, but we have come to the conclusion at this point that it is the best we can come up with," he said. "We will be recommending acceptance."

Similar contracts have been tentatively approved by Hydro's office workers and gas fitters.

Hydro had complained that the union was abusing the spare board system of assigning drivers by assigning senior employees to overtime while others who had not put in a full shift were collecting a daily 7½-hour guarantee.

Ashton said several minor problems the company raised with the spare board have been resolved, but that the basic system has been kept intact.

He said the union has agreed to allow the company to assign all extra work reported the night before, thus cutting down on the work on the board during the day.

The union had demanded that the work week be cut to 35 hours from 37½ hours.

Bus drivers staged a week-long strike last month to back their demands.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 40-year-old Victoria man was committed for higher court trial Friday on two counts of first-degree murder.

Judge William Ostler ordered the committal of John George Auxi, 117 St. Andrews, following a preliminary hearing which lasted 3½ days and ended in Victoria provincial court Friday shortly before noon.

Auxi is charged in the shooting deaths of 41-year-old Gizelle Schild and 43-year-old Sandor Kormos in a rooming house at 1242 Fort on Dec. 11.

Auxi was formally charged March 7 and was declared mentally fit to stand trial two days later.

Defence lawyer David Vickers, former deputy attorney general, and Crown counsel Nicholas Lang, assisted by Ken Salt of the attorney general's ministry, handled the preliminary, which had been scheduled for four days this week. Both agreed that the trial, by judge and jury, is expected to get under way June 15. Lang said outside the court that the trial is expected to take eight days with approximately 18 witnesses being called by the prosecution.

The preliminary hearing into a charge of conspiracy to fabricate evidence to be used in a judicial proceeding against three men has been set for six days starting July 21.

Bruce John Anderson, 25, of 3715 Belgrave, Bruce William Shinnan, 24, of 616 Kent, and Dennis Michael Nanos, 18, of 1625 Belmont, were jointly charged Tuesday and Anderson and Shinnan were denied bail by Judge Blake Allan. Nanos was released on his own recognizance in the sum of $2,500.

Two Vancouver men charged with causing a disturbance by fighting April 16 had their trial set for Aug. 25.

Bakitawar Singh Graywal, 26, and Rajinder Singh Saprai, 20, were charged following an incident involving approximately 200 East Indians at a playing field at S.J. Willis Junior High. Both entered not-guilty pleas April 17.

Berthier Belzile of Drummondville entered the plea to a charge and crown counsel Don Laughton told the court a young woman walking in the 300-block Gorge Road East approached Belzile to ask the time Thursday afternoon. Laughton said Belzile then exposed himself to her, saying, "How do you like that?"

The Lovers' Rose

Fashion's favourite, a delicate stickpin.
In gold vermeil, hand-enamelled in glowing colours and, on one petal, an exquisite diamond dewdrop . . .

In Venice, long ago, an angry father told his daughter it was as likely she would marry her lover as it was for a rose to bloom in early spring. But Fate took a hand. And outside the maiden's window a single perfect rose burst miraculously into bloom.

Ever since that time, in that romantic city, lovers have observed a charming custom. On the Feast of St. Mark, in April, each ardent suitor seeks out a single perfect rose to give his love.

Now you can share this springtime custom, and give the precious Lovers' Rose. Formed into fashion's favourite of the moment . . . an elegant stickpin. In gold vermeil. Hand-painted in richly glowing enamel colours. And — perfectly placed on one softly curling petal — a lovely little many-faceted diamond, like a drop of dew at sunrise.

Available only until May 10, and only from The Franklin Mint

Gov't to Pay $138M Rent

Budgetary estimates show that provincial government ministries are expected to pay $138 million on rent to the B.C. Buildings Corp. for office space this year — an increase of 47 per cent compared with last year's rents.

Don Larsen, liaison co-ordinator for Public Worker Minister Alex Fraser, said Friday the increase was due to several new factors.

He said provincial buildings for the first time in 1978 will pay their full share of property taxes, a change that will increase the operating budget by about $14 million.

Larsen also said three new government buildings recently completed will add to costs. The current Social Credit government prefers to rent space, rather than build their own structures, as was favored by the former New Democratic Party government.

He added that the BCBC is for the first time charging the ministries full rent. Before the establishment of the corporation last year, rental costs were often hidden.

Largest building occupancy charges will be incurred by the ministry of health, which will pay out $31.6 million, compared with $16.6 million last year.

Tax Exempt Items Cleared

Cabinet has approved an order-in-council implementing the farmer and fishermen sales tax exemptions announced in the budget speech earlier this month, Finance Minister Evan Wolfe said Friday.

Additional farm items exempted include: metal silos, fence posts, drain tiles, cloches, stainless steel wash tanks and auxiliary generating equipment, Wolfe said.

Fishermen's survival suits have also been exempted from the five per cent sales tax, the minister said.

TRAFFICKER EXECUTED

SINGAPORE (Reuter) — A convicted drug trafficker was hanged at dawn today in the first execution carried out under Singapore's tough narcotics laws. An official announcement said Teh Sin Tong, a 28-year-old Malaysian laborer from Penang, was hanged at the island's Changi prison. He had been sentenced to death in October for trafficking in 254,7 grams of pure heroin.

$1M FOR RETARDED

Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm said Friday he has approved $1.1 million in capital and operating grants for the establishment of eight community homes for the retarded and handicapped.

The grants include $135,010 to purchase homes and $1 million in operating funds for the current fiscal year, Vander Zalm said in a news release.

The homes will provide a community-based residence for 45 retarded and physically handicapped children, many of whom now are at Woodlands School in New Westminster, he said.

In addition, the minister said, two grants have been approved to provide in-home support services for about 50 handicapped persons and their families in the Greater Vancouver area.

Crawling to Mental Health

family

Teach a child the right way to crawl and you save that child from possible brain damage or, supposing, the damage has already occurred, you help cure it.

That's the theory Margaret George, daughter of Victoria's ex-mayor Percy George and Mrs. George was teaching back in the mid-1960s as the only neurological organization rehabilitationalist (NOR) in Canada.

And that is the theory she is still teaching today.

In the 1960s, Ms. George worked in a clinic at Banff, sponsored by the Canadian unit of The Institutes for the Achievement of Human Potential (IAHP) and her case load was close to 150 brain-injured children.

Now, 13 years later, that clinic, still sponsored by the IAHP, is situated in the prestigeous Bowness Medical Centre in Calgary.

Margaret George is the director. Her case load has more than trebled and she travels from Vancouver Island to Sydney, Nova Scotia, seeing each child on the IAHP program, every three months.

Her title now is cybernetic development mentalist (CDM).

That, according to her, means studying the cerebral nervous system and the functions of the brain and stressing the importance of floor activities — crawling and creeping — in correctional programs.

Again she is the only CDM in Canada.

A baby is born with a drive to get moving, she says.

If it is denied freedom of movement, that part of the brain controlling movement is not used and damage is the result.

Helping such brain-injured children to become "normal" is the main purpose of the IAHP.

Treatment is designed to stimulate "the remaining part of the brain into taking over functions of the injured section by imposing patterns of activity which help develop the brain of a normal, unhurt child."

In what the clinic describes as passive table therapy, the first step is "to teach or program the brain to produce the function of crawling."

Right way of crawling, according to Margaret George, leads on to "how well a child is going to be able to walk and run, how well the eyes are going to function for reading, the hands are going to respond to printing and writing and the ears are going to comprehend the words a teacher speaks."

The child is placed on a table, stomach down, and helped to learn the crawling function by moving the arms, legs and head in a rhythmic motion.

Depending on the degree of brain injury, this is done for an hour, sometimes more, and for a prescribed time, seven days a week.

Through this "passive therapy" mobility is produced and, in time, the child is pulling itself up and is seeing, hearing and responding.

Co-operation of the parents is "a must", Margaret George says, "because ours is basically a home program."

When parents bring a child to a clinic, they are told the principles and theory behind the program and are then taught to work with the child.

"We go after the source of the problem," she said. "It's a fairly new idea . . . a controversial system of neurological rehabilitation in many instances and it has raised a storm in some medical circles."

However, she adds, "we are helping children who have been diagnosed as incurably brain damaged."

Margaret George knows what she is talking about, not only from results she has seen in her work, but through personal experience.

She has a daughter that at one time was said to be retarded. Through the IAHP method that daughter progressed until she became normal.

Today she is happily married and with a child of her own "normal in every way."

On her travels across Canada, Ms. George sets up ambulatory clinics in 10 different centres, including Toronto where she spends the best part of a month on each visit.

Among children she sees are paraplegics "one of whom sat up for a first time after treatment"; cerebral palsy victims "whom we have helped but not cured"; mongoloids "to whom we have given hope and life", as well as the emotionally disturbed, the hyper-active, the autistics and the mentally retarded.

In the 13 years since the clinic started in Canada, she has met and trained parents and helped children in more than 3,500 families across the country.

"We are only beginning to grasp the intricacies of the human brain," she said, "nevertheless our form of therapy has helped 70 per cent of our patients to improve and one-third of that number have become normal."

Theories on which the IAHP works in the United States originated in the late 1950s with Dr. Temple Fay best known for his work in hypothermia (human refrigeration).

Now there are Institutes for the Achievement of Human Potential in over 20 countries around the world.

Postscript — The IAHP in Canada has been non-subsidized and non-sponsored, over the years. Recently however it was granted charitable status by the federal government which opens the door to it receiving donations and grants from interested individuals and organizations.

It has also printed quite recently a small booklet of do's and don'ts of early cerebral motor stimulation that include the suggestion that too early use of play-pens, swings and jumpers (so many young mother's rely on) can restrict freedom of movement in a child.

HEART DISEASE STILL No.1 KILLER

OTTAWA (CP) - Heart disease is still the most common cause of death in Canada, with cancer running a close second, says a recent report by Statistics Canada.

Although the death rate for heart disease for men dropped by nearly 12 per cent in the last 10 years, it was responsible for 34.7 per cent of all deaths in 1976, the report said. The death rate for women with heart disease is almost 32 per cent lower than it is for men.

Cancer was responsible for 20.9 per cent of all deaths and since 1950, the death rate for cancer in men increased by 28 per cent. For women, the death rate increased by only six per cent.

The high death rate for men with cancer appears to be an increase in lung cancer.

If They Feel Inhibited, That's Their Problem

DEAR ABBY: I am a 21-year-old female college senior. The week of graduation, I am giving a party for my friends and instructors in my parents' home. (I live at home.) I am going to serve food and plenty of beer to about 80 guests at my parents' expense.

My problem: How does one tactfully tell her parents when it's time for them to excuse themselves and go upstairs? Please don't get me wrong. I love my parents and want them to meet my friends and teachers, but I'm afraid my guests will be inhibited if my parents hang around all evening. Thank you. — PARTY GIRL.

DEAR PARTY GIRL: If there is a "tactful" way to tell one's parents to get lost in their own home (and after footing the bill for a party of 80 yet!), I don't know what it could be. If any of your guests feel "inhibited" with your parents around, that's their problem. Of course, if your parents read this, you'll have no problem. (And possibly no party.)

DEAR ABBY: I am desperate. After 15 years of a very stormy off-again, on-again marriage, my husband has asked me for a divorce. It all started a year ago when, in the middle of a heated argument, I told him that his lovemaking did nothing for me — I had only been putting on an act. It wasn't even the truth. Knowing how proud he is of his masculinity, I said it because I knew it would hurt him. I never realized it would hurt him so much that it would destroy all his feeling for me. He hasn't kissed me or touched me since that terrible argument, and now he says he wants a divorce.

Abby, I'll do anything in the world to get my husband back. I don't want a divorce. Pleae, tell me what to do. — RAZOR-SHARP TONGUE.

DEAR TONGUE: Unless you can convince your husband that you spoke in anger and didn't mean what you said, there may be no way you can get your husband back. This may not help you much, but it may serve to let others know that one seldom regrets unspoken words.

DEAR ABBY: Do you think a grandparent should ever spank a grandchild? What is a grandparent to do when grandchildren, ages three and five, are visiting and both want to sit on the same chair? Or both want to play with the same toy? The older one appears to take advantage of the younger one. I have tried to teach them to share and be kind to each other, but it doesn't seem to mean anything to them.

Spanking always worked with my children, but my son, who is the father of these scrapping youngsters, insists that children should be "talked" to and made to obey without laying a hand on them. These two don't appear to be very well behaved to me. I still think a couple of whacks would straighten them out fast. What do you think? — GRANDPARENT.

DEAR GRANDPARENT: When you hit a child, you teach him violence. There are better ways to discipline.

Synthetics Best for Some

By MAY E. MacLEAN

KNIT AND CHAT

I am often asked the suitability of synthetic yarn over wool, or vice versa. I always try to steer the middle of the road when answering, as synthetics serve their purpose for certain use, while wool has it's own good points. It very much depends on what you are going to make and it's use and wear.

Synthetic yarns are man made. They can imitate all the good points of wool, and build in some advantages of their own. Its main strong point is the wearability, it's both soft and strong, will not shrink, is color-fast, the thread is always consistent, and is resistant to pilling or felting as the fibres stay together yet always feel soft.

It's an ideal fibre for today's modern living as synthetics are completely machine washable and dryable, making them extremely suitable for children's wear.

On the other hand, wool cannot be beaten for warmth, cosiness, and good looks. It does require more attention when being washed and pressed. Care should be taken not to have the water too hot, and all sweaters should be dried flat and away from direct heat.

What you use, how you use it, and for what purpose, will have to be decided by you. Each has its place for hand-knitting or crochet. Some people are allergic to wool, while others cannot stand the feel of synthetics.

Have you every wondered what to do with shirts that are perfectly good except the collar and cuffs are worn out? I came across what I thought was quite a good idea while visiting with some friends the other day.

Cut out the back of the shirt, up each side, around the armholes and across the yoke. Lay it out flat, and you will readily see that it is almost the shape of an old-fashioned pinafore. By taking pleats each side of the centre front at the approximate waist level, you can fashion it more into the apron shape.

Using the sleeves, cut two strips, one from the centre of each sleeve so that you get the longest possible length, and make this into a band. Sew this band in place over the pleats, to form the waistband and ties. Hem all round the shape. Fashion another band for around the neck from the remainder of the fabric in the sleeves and attach to either side of the bib piece. Pockets can also be cut from the remainder of the pieces and sewn in the appropriate place.

I though this a rather good idea, as shirts in the past have been in all bright colors and from wash and wear fabrics. You can also make a half apron, by joining the two fronts, even adding the buttons over the buttonholes, and pleating them onto a waistband.

This week's pattern is a 3-piece crochet outfit to dress up your bathroom. Crocheted with a sayelle synthetic yarn so that it is completely machine washable and dryable. The yarn is about the thickness of a knitting worsted with a No. 7 crochet hook or 4.50 mm if you have already gone metric.

To order this week's pattern No. 1177, send 75 cents, PLUS a self addressed stamped envelope, long one if possible. If you do not have a stamp or envelope, please enclose an extra 75 cents to cover the cost of handling and print your name and address. Send to: May E. MacLean, "KNIT & CHAT", 486 Montford Drive, Dollard des Ormeaux, Roxboro, Que.

Please be sure to state pattern numbers correctly when ordering and to enclose your stamped return envelope for fast service. Allow about two weeks for normal delivery. All my back numbers in my series are available, price 75 cents; catalogues 25 cents; Quilting by the Square, $2.50. All orders must be accompanied with a stamped return envelope, or an extra 25 cents to cover cost of handling.

Free for the Asking

By HARRIET HART

Although advertising has become part of our daily lives, its function in our modern world is not fully understood by many whom it serves.

The 20-page pamphlet Advertising Today states that the purpose of advertising, in whatever form, is to provide news about a product to a great many people at once.

The pamphlet explains the advertising process and answers some interesting questions, such as: Who benefits from advertising? How much is spent in Canada on advertising? Does advertising add to the cost of goods and services?

To the question if an unadvertised article can be sold for less than one that is advertised, the pamphlet replies: "Possibly". However, as a rule, you won't buy, unless you know something about the item. And advertising is one way to learn about a product or service.

Sometimes the claim is made that a firm is saving money because it does not advertise and passes the savings along to the consumer. However, this statement itself is a form of advertising.

The pamphlet also deals with other aspects of advertising and discusses some career opportunities in the industry.

Send your request to: Public Relations Department, Canadian Advertising Advisory Board, 1240 Bay Street, Suite 302, Toronto, Ont. M5R 2A7.

Please indicate your postal code and allow at least 2-3 weeks for delivery.

Wonderful World of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: It started years ago with leftover Easter eggs. We discovered Inky was crazy about them. He enjoyed hard-boiled eggs for years. Then along came the cholesterol bit and we cut him off. Now I am reading that eggs aren't that bad after all and he would be one happy dog if he had hard-boiled eggs again. What I want to know is should he have his hard-boiled eggs back or not. — R.E.

DEAR R.E.: Hard-boiled eggs are in again as a desirable food since they are tops in high quality protein and the cholesterol they contain is more than balanced by lecithin which may actually lower blood cholesterol levels. Blood vessel clogging with cholesterol isn't all that common with canines, anyway. If Inky's doctor doesn't nix the extra protein (if Inky's on a low protein diet for a kidney problem, for example) his hard-boiled habit can be resumed. Limit the quantity, of course, even during an Easter egg hunt.

DEAR DR. MILLER: I have a parakeet who thinks he's a rabbit. He absolutely adores carrots. Is it all right for Bird-O to eat his rabbit fare without washing it or scraping off the outside? — W.H.

DEAR W.H.: To be on the safe side, I'd recommend giving the carrots a washing before Bird-O begins his rabbit act.

DEAR DR. MILLER: What is "LCP" disease? My sister's little poodle has it. — R.C.

DEAR R.C.: Legg-calve-perthes (LCP) is a degenerative bone disease of the upper thigh bone (the femur) which causes increasing amounts of hip pain and lameness. LCP affects young dogs of miniature breeds. To date, the only effective symptomatic treatment is surgical removal of the diseased bone.

DEAR DR. MILLER: I have been around dogs enough to know those smelly anal glands around the rectum need to be cleaned out once in a while. That's why I am wondering if a similar odor which my old cat, Spitty, is showing up with might not be anal glands, too. Or do cats have this problem? Do they even have anal glands? — S.S.

DEAR S.S.: Yes, cats do have anal glands and Spitty, since she is aged, would be more prone to problems with these glands than would a younger cat. Any abnormal odor should be accounted for via a checkup. Anal gland infection or impaction might be solved by a simple cleanout or it might require more elaborate treatment if indeed it proved to be a problem at all.

DEAR DR. MILLER: We have a son, 6, and a daughter, 5. We're thinking of getting them some hamsters for pets before they graduate to bigger animals, like a dog, maybe. Is there anything special we should know about the care and feeding of hamsters? — P.M.

DEAR P.M.: Hamsters are pretty rugged little animals. Packaged rabbit food plus some greens will provide a good diet. Damp quarters and high and low temperatures should be avoided. The favorite sport of hamsters is the same as that of a lot of other travellers on the planet Earth — and the result can be a lot more hamsters than you may want to have around.

your health

By L. L. COLEMAN, M.D.

My 11-year-old boy gets a crop of warts on his fingers. Some of them disappear. Others hang on and become very embarrassing to him. We've tried having them burnt and cauterized. Someone suggested that X-ray treatment is the best cure. Do you agree? — MRS. F.A.K.

DEAR MRS. K.: I most certainly do not agree. The "someone" who spoke so authoritatively was obviously not a doctor. Consequently, he was not aware of the potential hazards of using X-ray therapy for the treatment of warts.

Before any kind of treatment for warts is used, their exact nature must be determined by a skin specialist, for there are many different forms of wart. Some of them come and go spontaneously, without any treatment. Others can be cauterized with chemicals and with electrosurgery. Still others are treated by curetting them or with surgery.

Dr. Arther Kern, at the Miriam Hospital in Providence, R.I., is a dermatologist. On the subject of warts he wisely said, "Traumatic, destructive and mutilating treatment has no place in the therapy for young children. Always try simple, conservative measures first. It may help to reassure parents about the likelihood that warts will disappear, often without treatment."

By all means, forget about X-ray for the warts, and help your son to place less importance on them.

Legislate. . .or Vote, Clark Challenges PM

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition Leader Joe Clark Friday challenged Prime Minister Trudeau to either call an election now or bring meaningful legislation before the House of Commons.

"I think there should be a national election now," Clark told about 500 supporters at a political rally here.

He said there should be a change in the federal government "which has run out of steam, which has run out of ideas, which has run out of energy."

The federal Progressive Conservative leader was accompanied by Ontario Premier William Davis who left no doubt that he and the party machine in Ontario were prepared to play an active role in support of the Clark campaign in the federal election expectec next month.

"Iam more than prepared to participate," Davis said.

'MPs Mark Time'

OTTAWA (CP) - It's not just Canadians who are getting tired of election rumors. Walter Baker, Conservative house leader, says MPs are just marking time waiting for Prime Minister Trudeau to dissolve Parliament and get the election show on the road.

Baker said in a weekend interview with Standard Broadcast News that legislation the government has placed before MPs is not especially urgent while issues of more importance seem to be overlooked.

"If you accept the major problem facing the country is the economic situation, we are not dealing with economic legislation in any real sense, in any direct way, he said."

The greatest Canadian problem to be tackled is that of unemployment, he added.

S. African Code Criticized

OTTAWA (CP) — The government announced Friday a code of conduct for Canadian businesses operating in South Africa but it was immediately branded toothless by some critics.

The code, announced by the external affairs department, urges equal pay, improved fringe benefits and working conditions as well as bargaining rights for blacks employed by Canadian companies in South Africa.

These companies have been asked to report annually on their efforts to meet the guides and an external affairs spokesman said he expects they will. The code is voluntary.

Spokesmen for Ford of Canada and Massey-Ferguson, two companies with subsidiaries in South Africa, said their firms saw drafts of the code before it was released. Neither company had any objections.

The United States and Britain already have similar codes.

The Canadian Labor Congress (CLC) and an inter-church group said the code lacks teeth and should be mandatory.

John Rodriguez, New Democratic MP for Nickel Belt, said the code is "as effective as a roaring rabbit." Rodriguez has long been an outspoken critic of Canadian policy towards South Africa.

An external affairs official said Canada's policy is not to interfere with private business operating in other countries. That was why Canada did not make the code mandatory.

The code recommends:

—Black workers should get equal work for equal pay. They should be paid wages at least 50 per cent above the subsistence level.

—These workers should get improved fringe benefits like medical and pension plans, disability insurance, sick leave and vacations.

—Companies should train blacks so they can be promoted more quickly to supervisory jobs.

—Companies should, "to the fullest extent possible," integrate their working, dining, recreational, educational and training facilities.

—Black employees should have normal bargaining rights even though South African law says black organizations are not "registered trade unions."

CLC President Dennis McDermott said in a statement the code is an "important step in the right direction" but there are no methods for seeing how the companies comply.

Clarke MacDonald, of the Taskforce on Churches and Corporate Responsibility, said the code sets out valuable standards but it is "useless unless Canadian companies are obliged to follow it." MacDonald, a United Church official, was speaking for the inter-church group which has been speaking out against racial discrimination in southern Africa.

NO ROOM FOR AMIN

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government has already made it clear that Ugandan President Idi Amin is not welcome at the Commonwealth Games in Edmonton this summer, Deputy Prime Minister Allan MacEachen said today.

MacEachen was replying to former prime minister John Diefenbaker who said there is widespread objection to Amin's presence at the Games because of the African president's record of atrocities.

MacEachen said Amin seeks international publicity and said "the most constructive thing we could all do is forget about him."

Political Ads Curbed on TV

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission (CRTC) advised cable TV operators Friday not to carry any "free-access" programming related to the federal election except during the 28-day period preceeding polling for a general election.

Such programming, carried on cable TV's community channel, basically gives members of the community a free hand to produce their own shows. MPs often use this time to explain issues and plug their performances.

"Since this type of programming is so closely related to political advertising, the commission advises that it should be permitted only during the 28-day period which is allowed for radio and television advertising under the Canada Elections Act," the CRTC said in a news release.

But a CRTC official said the commission has no specific power to enforce the suggestion because there are no laws or regulations prohibiting such broadcasts.

The CRTC also reminded cable operators that they are prohibited from selling advertising time, including time for political ads.

Referendum Won't Be End: Ryan

MONTREAL (CP) — Claude Ryan, leader of the provincial Liberal party, says the debate over Quebec's constitutional status will not end, even if the federalists win the independence referendum promised by the Parti Quebecois.

In interviews published today in the Montreal Star and Le Devoir, Ryan says it will be up to the winners of the referendum to "push back the separatist idea in people's minds," by concrete accomplishments and not simply by fear.

"I think that the debate will not have been closed forever because a referendum has been held," he said.

If some Quebecers continue to advocate political sovereignty, "obstacles must not be put in the way of this democratic development."

Ryan said he discovered during his leadership campaign that the constitutional question interests the ordinary Quebecer because "he has understood the referendum thing. He knows it will be a big decision.

"He wants to background himself. He is interested in hearing the two points of view."

The major actors in the referendum campaign will be the provincial parties, provincial politicians and the citizens of Quebec, said Ryan. But he added that if some federal politicians who are also citizens of Quebec want to intervene as private citizens, no one can challenge their right to do so.

If the government asks a fair and direct question, the referendum can have an important value, he said, defining a fair question as: "Are you in favor of political sovereignty for Quebec accompanied, if possible, by an economic association with the rest of Canada."

Asked whether the Quebec Liberals will adopt a more nationalist attitude under his leadership than under former premier Robert Bourassa, Ryan replied he wouldn't aim for that.

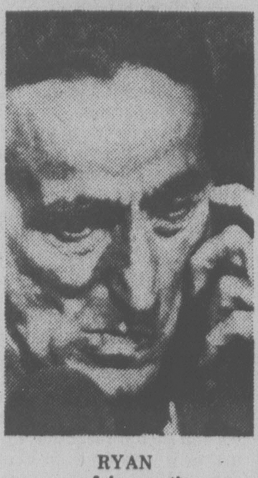
"What I would aim for are more precise constitutional objectives, defined with much more rigor; I would bring much more before the public; I would try to make progress with far more energy."

He did not specify any objectives, but said he thinks all the "legitimate parliaments" of Canada, including the 10 provincial governments and the federal government, must be involved in discussions of constitutional change.

As the talks progress, it will become evident that some questions should be discussed between Quebec and Ottawa, others between Ottawa and other provinces.

Ryan defended his idea that Canada should be divided into five regions, saying that in many instances the concept is already recognized.

"Look at the organization of services within the federal government. In many departments, services are organized on a regional basis



RYAN
. . .a fair question

... So there is nothing new or fantastic or stupid in this idea."

In recent weeks he had played down the idea of reorganizing Canada into a Prairie region, an Atlantic region, and the existing provinces of Quebec, Ontario and British Columbia.

Quebecers are waiting for Ryan to make up his mind whether to run for the seat of Notre Dame de Grace in west-end Montreal, recently vacated by Bryce Mackasey. But Ryan said he will not make up his mind on this question for a couple of weeks.

He is considering remaining outside the national assembly for some time to focus his energies on rebuilding the party.

"If we want a party that has its own life, a continuous life, a life that goes beyond electoral dates . . . is it worthwhile that for a period of six months or a year, the leader gives the largest part of his energy to this?"

On the other hand, when the national assembly debates the referendum, "it would be better for the leader to be there, facing the leader of the government, facing the music immediately. And the assembly, despite its obvious limitations, remains perhaps the most important public forum for a political leader."

Ryan said he plans to meet Raymond Garneau, his opponent in the leadership race, when Garneau returns from vacation.

He dismissed reports of a split with Garneau, saying that if the latter is interested in working at the provincial level, "I feel there is a well-deserved place for him there."

'Marchand' Paper Entered

TORONTO (CP) — A copy of a federal treasury board document said to be signed by Jean Marchand, a senator and former Liberal cabinet minister, was entered as Crown evidence Friday in a dredging-conspiracy trial.

The document relates to a 1972 department of transport contract awarded to Richelieu Dredging Corp. Inc., for work at Cap-a-la-Roche on the St. Lawrence River.

Eleven businessmen and nine companies, including Richelieu, are charged in Ontario Supreme Court with conspiring to defraud public agencies of more than $4.27 million by rigging dredging bids.

The stated topic of the document was: "Authority to enter contract." The handwritten words "Original signed by J. Marchand" appeared at the bottom.

The document described the contract and listed its value and the bids of four companies interested, including Richelieu's winning bid.

It related to evidence by former Richelieu president Horace Rindress, who earlier testified the contract was awarded Aug. 21, 1972, after he asked Jean Simard, a vice-president and director of Richelieu at the time, to approach Marchand. Simard is one of the accused.

Mr. Justice William Parker told the jury the document was entered as an exhibit to support Rindress' evidence, not to prove the truth of its contents.

In a statement to the RCMP on Feb. 14, 1975, and entered as an exhibit, Rindress said he had deposited a $25,000 cheque into what he was told was the numbered campaign account of Senator Marchand, then a federal cabinet minister.

In his statement to the RCMP, Rindress said Simard told him "either that Marchand was in his pocket or he had him wrapped around his little finger."

"I can't remember which of the two expressions he used."

Quang Permit Renewal Hint

MONTREAL (CP) — Dang Van Quang, a former Vietnamese general who has been ordered deported from Canada, has apparently had his work permit renewed, an immigration spokesman indicated. The permit was to have expired Friday.

The spokesman would not confirm that the permit had been renewed, saying he didn't want to disclose details of a client's file, but he added: "You can draw your own conclusions."

Employment and Immigration Minister Bud Cullen said in the Commons Thursday that Quang, who has been working as a dishwasher in a Montreal restaurant, was first given a permit because it seems "more appropriate that he should be working and not living off welfare."

Canada has been unable to carry out the deportation order because it has not found a country willing to accept Quang.

The former general arrived in Canada in May, 1975, following the fall of Saigon. He was ordered deported from Canada after disclosure that he had been involved in heroin trafficking and corruption in Vietnam.

Maverick Break-Ins Cited

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A number of allegedly illegal FBI break-ins conducted against suspected subversives during 1974 were done in many cases without the approval of high bureau officials, it was reported today.

The Washington Post said William L. Gardner, who formerly headed the Justice Department investigation of the FBI burglary allegations, disclosed the information about the 1974 break-ins during testimony to a Senate committee.

The Post said Attorney General Griffin Bell has not moved to prosecute those allegedly guilty of the burglaries, but instead decided to refer the cases back to the FBI for internal disciplinary moves.

Earlier this month, former FBI Director L. Patrick Gray and two of his top aides were indicted on charges they approved illegal break-ins during 1972 and 1973. There is no evidence, the Post said, to link high bureau officials to the 1974 incidents.

Sources told the newspaper there are indications the 1974 break-ins were ordered by officials in the New York FBI office, without high-level approval.

Parent-Suing Son Explains Why

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Tom Hansen says his father struck him only once as a teen-ager. But Hansen, now 24, says a decade of emotional distress caused him to bring a $350,000 damage suit against his parents.

"It's hard for me to work at a job where there is someone over me. . . I start arguing with my father in my head, I feel criticized for everything I do," said Hansen, adding that he now lives on social security mental disability payments.

The parental malpractice suit, filed in Boulder District Court on Wednesday, seeks $250,000 for medical expenses and $100,000 in punitive damages from his parents, Shirley and Richard Hansen, who maintain residences in Boulder and Hilo, Hawaii. Neither could be contacted for comment.

Hansen said his problems began 10 years ago with a week-long weed-cutting session after he and his two sisters were suspended from prep school for smoking marijuana.

"My father became pretty upset, and, well, he took off work for a week and had us cutting weeds in the backyard with sessions of lectures, like what did I think so-and-so's mother thought about me now."

He said the disciplinary work sessions lasted all day with two meals of oatmeal "but no milk on it. I had to sneak food from the refrigerator. I felt guilty for taking food."

Hansen said that after the weed-cutting discipline he was in and out of public and private schools and he became a compulsive marijuana smoker.

He said his father threw him out of the house for good at age 17 after he was expelled again.

Hansen, who says his psychiatrist has diagnosed him as "a latent paranoid schizophrenic with recurring homicidal tendencies," said he believes the parental malpractice suit will "relieve a sense of personal injustice against myself."

He said he has only fantasized violent acts and has never injured anyone.

Hansen said he loves his parents but hopes his suit will "say to parents they have got to respect the kids, they are individuals, they need privacy, space and rights."

A Chilling Reminder Of Old Curse

POINT PLEASANT, W.Va. (UPI) — Shawnee Chief Cornstalk lay dying of wounds inflicted by the white settlers he had befriended. His last words, uttered 199 years ago, were a curse that some oldtimers think is being fulfilled.

"I was a friend of the bordermen," the dying chief said. "Many a time I have saved him and his people from harm. I came to your house as a friend, and you murdered me.

"For this, may the curse of the Great Spirit rest upon this spot. May its people be paralyzed by the stain of my blood."

Up the Ohio River Thursday, another chapter in West Virginia's history was written Thursday at Willow Island with the deaths of 51 workmen killed in the collapse of a scaffold at a power plant.

On Dec. 15, 1967 — in Point Pleasant, the very town where Cornstalk was slain — began a decade of tragedy with the collapse of the Silver Bridge into the Ohio River. Forty-six people were killed.

On Aug. 10, 1968, a Piedmont Airlines plane crashed near the Kanawha Airport in Charleston. Thirty-five were killed.

Before the year was out, on Nov. 20, 1968, a series of fires and methane explosions rumbled through the No. 9 mine of Consolidation Coal Co. Seventy-eight miners were killed.

Two years later a chartered twin-jet DC-9 returning the Marshall University football team from a game in Greenville, N.C., missed Tri-State Airport near Huntington and slammed into a hillside. All 75 people aboard were killed.

West Virginia's worst flood occurred Feb. 26, 1972, when a coal mine dam fell apart at the head of a canyon in Logan County, setting loose a tidal wave that devasted mining towns along 18-mile Buffalo Creek Hollow.

Political abuse has been a fellow traveler of disaster. In modern history, two governors and some lesser political figures have left the Capitol under the shadow of scandal and disgrace.

After a few years' grace, disaster rode through again in 1977, this time again as a flood, tearing through an 11-county portion of southern West Virginia.

No one died directly because of the flood waters, but to this day the widespread destruction and property loss to a large degree haven't been replaced, and much of the flood-scarred region still isn't back on its feet.

AIRPORT AID

TOKYO (AP) — The government introduced legislation Thursday aimed at protecting Tokyo's new international airport from attacks by radical foes. It would permit police action against their strongholds near the new airport.

U.S. Veers from Family-Planning

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — In what could prove to be one of its most fateful decisions — one affecting the future of the entire planet — the Carter administration has quietly altered the American approach to the world population problem.

It has moved away from an emphasis on distribution of contraceptives, which was based on the theory that the key to inducing people to have fewer children is to make available family-planning services and technology. The administration now stresses instead the over-all idea of development, on the theory that it is necessary to motivate people to have smaller families and that the way to do so is to hold out the prospect of improving their lives as a whole.

This shift is perhaps more a matter of cumulative rolling effect than a choice among stark options; the consensus is at a new place. But it has been formalized at the National Security Council level, and it is affecting the things that count in Washington: budgets, programs, power.

The foundation for the shift was laid in the World Population Conference in Bucharest in 1974. The Third World's demand to have its general development tended to, not just to have its birth rate reduced, was registered strongly on Western participants. The feeling took root that it was somehow racist or imperialist, at the very least impolitic, to continue unchanged the contraceptive-oriented American family-planning programs that Lyndon Johnson had begun.

Then came President Carter, with his pronounced tendency to see Third World poverty as a consequence of Western moral and fiancial neglect; his curiously soft focus on population growth as an "environmental problem," as he described it in his Environment Message to Congress last year; and his personal preference, evident in his domestic views on abortion, for what is called a pro-natalist or pro-birth point of view.

At AID, Carter installed John Gilligan, the former Ohio governor, who turned out to be receptive to advisers, inside and outside the agency, who had been saying for several years that it was not enough to emphasize delivery of family-planning services. In due time that advice emerged, from the formal deliberations of an interagency panel called the NSC Ad Hoc Group on Population Policy, as a decision to "broaden out" AID's "earlier singular focus" on family planning and to go deeper into health, nutrition, education, rural and community development and "activities to increase the participation of women in development and decision-making."

Peking Rattles Sabres

TOKYO (AP) — A Chinese military leader indicated the Peking regime would take Taiwan by force under the proper circumstances, Japan's Kyodo news service reports from Peking.

The indication was in a statement made Friday by Wu Hsiu-chuan, deputy chief of the army general staff, the Kyodo dispatch says.

The late Chiang Kai-shek's nationalist forces fled to Taiwan when Mao Tse-tung's Communists took over China in 1949.

The Japanese report says Wu's statement was made to a group of Japanese military affairs researchers in a discussion of China's defence modernization program.

Wu suggested the "liberation" of Taiwan by arms if two conditions were met—adequate preparation of the army and proper international circumstances.

He is quoted as saying: "It is necessary for us to promote military preparation for liberation of Taiwan because we have to pass through the Taiwan strait.

Scientist Cooked Data For 'Racist' Theories

WASHINGTON — One of the foremost anthropologists of the 19th Century was denounced Friday as a racist who "finagled" his scientific results to depict whites as the superior race.

The denouncing of Samuel George Morton, a Philadelphia physician who ranked the races by the size of their skulls and their cranial capacities, was done in this week's Science magazine by Stephen Jay Gould, a paleobiologist at Harvard University. Gould spent the best part of two months reanalyzing the data that led Morton to conclude whites were superior to Indians and blacks. Gould's conclusions are dramatically different.

"There are no differences to speak of among Morton's races," Gould writes in the cover story in Science. "All I discern (in Morton's data) is an a priori conviction so powerful that it directed Morton's tabulations along pre-established lines — his folks on top, slaves on the bottom."

Morton's ranking of the races by brain size has long been forgotten, passed over by the acceptance of Darwin's Theory of Evolution and permanently supplanted by intelligence (IQ) tests. Gould says he chose to pursue his reanalysis of Morton's work because it raises an issue that scientists often sweep under the rug.

Arms Package To Congress

WASHINGTON (WP) — President Carter submitted his controversial Middle East arms sales package to Congress Friday, but dropped his public threat to withdraw the entire package if Congress blocks any part of the proposed sale of warplanes to Israel, Egypt and Saudi Arabia.

In what amounted at the least to a rhetorical retreat, administration officials said the president will now "reserve judgment" on his final action until after Congress acts on each of the sales separately.

But there were suggestions from the officials that Carter still intends to carry out his threat if necessary and had agreed to drop references to it as an all-or-nothing "package" in order to soothe, "congressional sensibilities."

"You're never going to hear the word package used again," one official said.

The $4.8 billion sale involves supplying 75 F-16 and 15 F-15 fighters to Israel, 50 F-5 fighters to Egypt and 60 F-15s to Saudi Arabia.

The key issue in the package is the Saudi plane sale, which is adamantly opposed by Israel and its supporters in Congress. Carter's determination to supply the Saudis with the planes — the most sophisticated fighter in the U.S. arsenal — is expected to set off a bitterly emotional debate in Congress and represent a severe test of strength between the administration and the so-called "Israeli lobby."

Although we consider insects in the garden to be pests we must also remember there are millions of insects to one human being on this planet, and those insects were around long before you and I arrived, each performing its allotted task as a link in the chain of life.

The same kind of insects will feed on the same kind of plants this year as they have done for generations past. We know it, and it is up to us to use our intelligence to outwit them.

If you grow cabbage and related plants you will have, or are liable to have, an infestation of the cabbage root maggot.

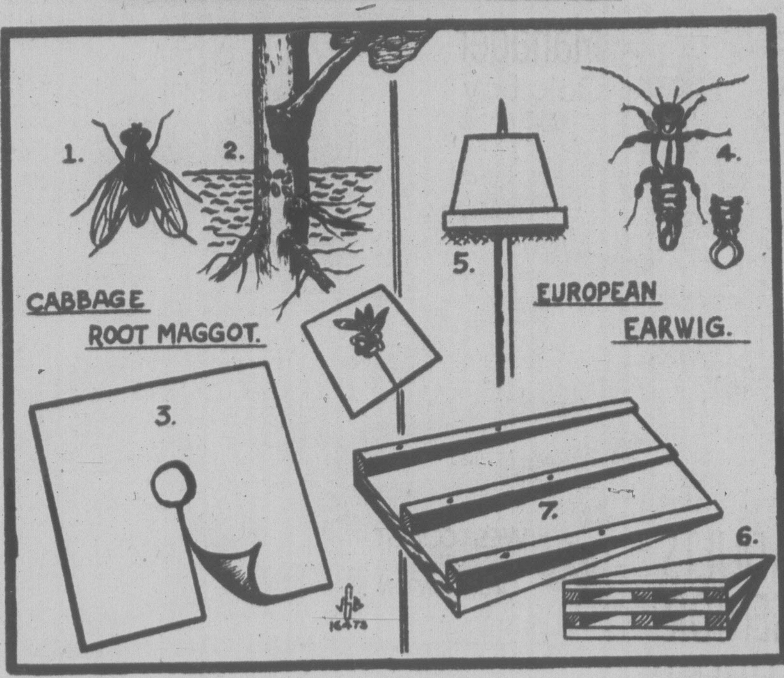
The maggots are the larvae of a fly (fig. 1 in the drawing) more slender and much more active than the common house fly. Already the flies are found indoors attracted by the smell of cabbage being prepared for a meal, evidence of their impatient search for a place to lay their eggs.

As soon as cabbage plants are set out the fly will deposit eggs. Since the eggs require warmth, a certain amount of moisture and protection, the logical place is just under the surface of the soil against the plant that will supply the young with food, see fig. 2.

The eggs will hatch in 10 days, the larvae gaining size and strength in a few hours, after which they burrow into the soil to feed on the fine hair-like feeding roots of the cabbage plant.

Knowing this we can plan our strategy. If we prevent the fly from laying eggs in the logical place, and cover the soil to prevent the larvae from burrowing, we could possibly save our plants.

This is known as prevention, and prevention is more practical, more effective, and a lot more sensible than trying to cope with an infestation later.



The cabbage mat, an invention of some practical gardener long before I was born (I had to make them for my father's garden) is one safe answer that has proved effective.

The mat (fig. 3) is about eight inches square cut from old old roofing, roofing felt, or heavy tarpaper. A hole about one inch in diameter is cut at the centre and a slit made from the hole to one edge for convenience in slipping the mat around the plant.

At planting time this centre hole will be considerably larger than the stem of the plant, leaving soil exposed at a vital point. We fill this space with soft polythene vegetable bags we get at the supermarket, stuffing it in so no soil is visible.

These mats should remain around the plants even if we have to enlarge the hole later as the plant stems increase in size. This is important as a protection against later generations.

Each maggot feeds for about two weeks, then emerges as a fly to lay eggs for another generation. It is repeated throughout the season, the last generation remaining in the soil as pupae looking like grains of wheat. Destroy these when digging.

Make a quantity of these mats before you set out your cabbage plants. Using them could mean the end of your root maggot troubles.

The European Earwig (fig. 4) was roaming around the garden in early February this year, a month earlier than usual. The female has straight nippers (or pincers). Wherever you see her the eggs or a nest of young will be close by. Eliminate these and you will prevent a lot of plant damage.

The earwig is an easy insect to trap. The young are similar to the adults, sometimes whitish in color and lacking the well-developed nippers.

They feed at night, a flashlight revealing hordes of youngsters swarming over succulent growth about 11 o'clock when most good gardeners are heading to bed. The chill of dawn sends these night marauders scurrying for warmth and shelter. Provide that amenity and you will catch a few hundred by morning.

The old standby has been clay pots stuffed loosely with dried grass and inverted on stakes (fig. 5). The length of the stakes is increased as the plants grow so that the pot is near the top of the plant and touching the foliage. The grass and the guests are emptied into a hot fire in the incinerator.

One shingle has three (or more if wide) half-inch strips tacked to one side. Two of these are made. Another full shingle covers the top and the three section are nailed together. No stuffing with grass is necessary. These traps are laid on the ground among the plants.

The night's catch can be knocked out into a hot fire, or into a pail of boiling water to which a few drops of kerosene has been added. The kerosene collects on top of the water preventing easy escape of the insects.

Many gardeners tell me that "somebody should do something about all these pests that ruin our plants." If you agree, now is the time to start.

Further traffic signal improvements at the heavily-travelled intersection of Cadboro Bay and Foul Bay will have to wait for leftover funds in the Oak Bay capital budget this year.

Council has rejected $28.530 worth of suggested capital spending that would have included about $9,000 to improve the Oak Bay side of the border intersection where Victoria has already made some changes.

Administrator James Craven said today if there are funds remaining from approved capital spending they may be applied to the additional items, which also include $7,500 to widen part of the 1400 block Beach Drive, $4,800 to build a catwalk on the Cattle Point boat launching ramp, $4,000 for a beach access below Rutland, Surrey and Beach, and further improvement to north Foul Bay Road.

Approved capital items include $97,000 to rebuild McNeill Avenue between Transit and Byng and $93,000 for reconstructing Monterey between Brighton and Windsor; $47,800 to build sidewalks, including $25,000 for a new one on Granite between Mitchell and Foul Bay; $15,000 for street lighting improvements, and $60,000 for watermain extensions.

A total $32.800 will be spent on new police equipment, of which $19,000 will be for Oak Bay's share of new Victoria-Oak Bay police radio equipment.

Children Offer Ransom

TORONTO (CP) — Two Toronto children, angry about the kidnapping of former Italian premier Aldo Moro, have offered a ransom for the politician's release — all their toys.

Agostino Russo, 11, and his twin sister, Elvira, made the offer in a recent telegram they sent to the Italian news agency ANSA.

"It's dumb," Agostino said of the kidnapping by Red Brigades terrorists.

"Kidnapping won't help because the government won't let their friends out of prison," he added.

In the telegram, the children said: "We beg you with tears in our eyes to free Aldo Moro. We promise to give you all our toys and pray to Jesus for you."

YOUR CITY WATCHDOG REPORT NUMBER 55
Congratulations to Robin Blencoe on his stand that minority viewpoints, in the form of reports or briefs by Aldermen be published either by xerox or printed at City Hall so as to inform taxpayers of other viewpoints. Congratulations to Alderman Larry Ryan on using the microphone for one of the few times at City council meetings to the best of your City Watchdog's knowledge. A slap on the wrist to whoever of Cedric Steele Realty Ltd. was responsible for "The Tall Ships are coming!" ad in the Victoria Times, Friday on page twelve regarding the better picture window view at Laurel Point. Your City's Watchdog understands that the tall ships will not be coming into the inner harbour. For further information regarding city matters please continue to phone 383-6259. Your City's Watchdog, C. Joe Richards. P.S.: A black spot goes to John Hayes on his reason for voting against the holding of City Council evening meetings for June. P.P.S.: A Special thank you to Red O'Connor.

Finally, it would help if you were pretty, both inwardly and otherwise. Victoria Press Box 752.

RED SHIELD CAMPAIGN OPENS WITH CANVASS

The Salvation Army annual Red Shield Appeal will be launched Monday with a residential blitz canvass in the evening.

The campaign goal during May is $180,000.

Harry Young, general campaign chairman, said it is essential that this amount be realized to meet the operating deficit on the Army's social service institutions and other humanitarian services which provided practical help and care to more than 60,000 needy persons last year.

Last year the Red Shield Appeal raised a total of $181,809.

The report notes shelter was given to 20,796 and meals to 39,057 through the men's social service hostels.

Counsel and treatment were provided for 118 alcoholics; 35,554 meals were served and 26,937 persons attended meetings at the Harbour Light Centre.

Visits were also made to 25,379 patients in hospitals and institutions by League of Mercy volunteers.

There were 1,833 interviews with men and women in court and prisons; 234 persons were assisted with legal aid and 72 chapel services and Bible studies were conducted.

The report also shows that 13 unmarried mothers were given supportive care and practical help in the Army's home.

Apart from these services, the Army provided assistance to people through the Family Services program and helped 112 persons to find jobs.

Vic General Trustees Table Controls on MDs

Victoria General Hospital trustees have tabled proposed bylaws that would limit the number of doctors using the hospital and its services.

The trustees decided to again review the medical manpower situation before dealing with the bylaws that have been more than three years in the making.

The decision was taken despite a plea by hospital medical director Dr. Don Carlow that the bylaws be passed now. He argued the board had already agreed on the necessity of the bylaws and the logical next step was to implement them.

The bylaws are aimed at ensuring doctors who use the hospital are qualified to perform hospital procedures and perform them frequently enough to maintain their expertise. Similar bylaws have been adopted by Royal Jubilee.

The bylaws are seen by some as a device to limit the number of doctors accorded hospital privilege. Victoria is considered to have a surfeit of doctors, many of whom come here to retire and keep on practising on a part-time basis.

Carlow said, however, the issue is simply one of trying to ensure the highest quality of care at the hospital.

The hospital's medical executive currently carries out regular reviews of doctors' files and is considering a system to review each file in depth every three years.

In other business the hospital board agreed to a motion that all future meetings of the board will be open to the public.

A 1972 resolution opened the meetings to the press, but did not mention the public.

Bank Demonstration

GIBSON'S — Members of the United Bank Workers section of the Service, Office and Retail Workers Union of Canada held a demonstration in front of the Gibson's branch of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce today.

Shirley Butt, a bank workers' spokesman, said the action was taken to protest the recent layoff of two of the bank's employees.

Butt said the employees, Carol Dulyk and Eileen Quigley, were laid off because they had attempted to organize the staff at the bank into joining the union.

She said demonstrations will continue until the two are reinstated.

SPARKS MAY FLY OVER REZONING 'NO'

The provincial highways ministry's refusal to approve a rezoning application involving 150 acres in the North Quadra area is expected to come under fire during the next meeting of Saanich council on Monday.

Mayor Mel Couvelier told the Cordova Bay Community Association he anticipates the debate will be hot and heavy.

Highways officials have indicated they will withhold approval of the rezoning application until council presents a satisfactory design for an east-west traffic artery between Quadra and Douglas.

Council has already given three readings to a bylaw which would see the area rezoned.

Couvelier also told the group a proposed bylaw to control tree cutting on private property is doomed to defeat.

He noted the bylaw has been redrafted 12 times and still isn't completed.

"It's now become an absurdity," he said. "What we have done is to prove the impracticability of writing such a bylaw."

The bylaw was originally proposed to curb wholesale tree removal by developers.

However, Couvelier said no bylaw could accomplish that.

The key to the problem, and the solution, he said, was simply education.

Bloodbath Feared In New Moro Letter

Times News Services

ROME (UPI) — A new letter from Aldo Moro turned up today and warned of "a resulting bloodbath" if officials persist in their refusal to negotiate with the guerrillas who kidnapped the five-time Italian premier.

The letter, found by a Rome journalist in his car, once again begged the Christian Democratic Party to stop "playing with the life of a man" and agree to the demands of the Red Brigade kidnappers.

Police experts said the 10-page letter was written with a "hand that seemed to tremble constantly" but they judged it authentic.

The letter appeared five days after a Red Brigades communique threatened to "execute" Moro immediately if the government did not release 13 prisoners, including several murderers.

Police said the caller telling the Il Messaggero reporter to look for the message did not begin the conversation with the usual phrase: "Here, the Red Brigades."

"How can you argue that the state will be ruined if once more an innocent man is exchanged for other persons in prison or in exile?" Moro wrote.

The 61-year-old president of the ruling Christian Democrats accused his party of being split on the "principles, and of doing nothing that a man, a member of prestige, a faithful party militant, should not be sent to his death."

"I have the power to convene an urgent party council," Moro wrote, "even if I am a prisoner. I do so."

MARIEL AIMS HIGH

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Mariel Aragon is in her second semester in a premed undergraduate program at University of Southern California. She hopes to be president of the United States one day.

Mariel is charming, beautiful, multi-lingual, articulate . . . and 12 years old.

She was 11 years old when she was accepted at USC, after one session at Johns Hopkins University in Washington, D.C.

"There was a lot of homework, about 100 pages a day in each subject," she said.

That wasn't too much. Mariel admits to reading 4,000 words a minute.

Among her current subjects at USC are chemistry and calculus. Is calculus difficult?

"No, I had it last semester," she laughed. "I've always enjoyed mathematics, ever since I was about two."

Leaders Executed In Kabul?

NEW DELHI (AP) — Rebel forces in Afghanistan appeared to be in absolute control today as calm returned to the capital of Kabul after a bloody two-day coup against President Mohammed Daoud's regime, Western diplomatic sources reported.

Unconfirmed reports said summary executions of top Daoud regime officials were being carried out, the sources said. There still was no independent confirmation of the rebel's claim that Daoud and his younger brother Naeem were killed in the takeover.

Tanks still were moving through the streets of Kabul but tensions were subsiding and air force officers who apparently led the coup were cheered in the streets, the sources said.

Guards were posted around the interior ministry, the palace grounds, Radio Kabul and the Bala Hissar Fortress.

The Military Revolutionary Council, headed by Col. Aslam Watanjar, ordered government workers, teachers, students and transport workers to carry on their regular activities and put a 10 p.m. curfew into effect.

The diplomatic sources said there have been no direct contacts between the Military Revolutionary Council and Western embassies and that the rebels' public statements still have not reflected a definite political orientation.

"They could be leftists or Islamic nationalists, two extremes," one source said. "But the council is not using the rhetoric of a Communist government. It's the sort of language used by people who would want to appear moderately progressive."

The Council's policy statements, some made by its spokesman, Lt. Gen. Abdul Qadir, said Afghanistan would be guided by Islamic principles and would stand for "democratic independence, progressive development and positive neutrality."

Invasion Of Locusts

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (UPI) — Swarms of red locusts have invaded two areas of Rukwa region of northwestern Tanzania, authorities said today.

Authorities say that the red locusts have blanketed an area of four square miles in a game reserve and are threatening to move into a nearby food producing area.

The locust invasion coincided with the opening in the town of Arusha, in northern Tanzania, of the 23rd ministerial council session of the Desert Locust Control Organization for eastern Africa.

Rhodesians Jittery, but Determined

By PETER OSNOS
and DAVID B. OTTAWAY
Washington Post

SALISBURY, Rhodesia — One month after its creation, Rhodesia's new multiracial government is beset by major military, political and economic problems as it struggles to find a broad base of support at home and abroad.

Notwithstanding signs of encouragment from South Africa and of growing sympathy in some Western circles, the transitional government still stands very much alone.

There is "tremendous apprehension" among whites, in the words of Prime Minister Ian Smith, about the changes that must come and mounting pressure from blacks to see quick evidence that a new era is dawning.

"To win over the black people, we have to be seen to be making changes. We can't just sing the praises of the (internal) settlement, we have to do something," said the new black co-minister of justice, Byron Hove.

It is precisely Hove's outspoken demand for such immediate signs of change as more and higher-ranking black policemen and judges that has upset an already jittery white population.

Smith and his white ministers, whatever their private feeling about the coming of black majority rule, are touring the country pleading with the 260,000 remaining whites to wait the final outcome before "jumping the gun" and leaving.

The black leaders of the transitional government are just as uncertain about the new situation. Still surrounded by white civil servants, secretaries and guards and sitting apart in bare offices, they are groping for ways to illustrate their new authority to the 6.7 million blacks.

Clearly the dilemma of this young, fragile experiment in multiracial co-operation is how to satisfy the country's two fundamentally different populations filled with contrasting fears and hopes. The new ruling Executive Council must also convince skeptical Western and African states that it has a true claim to representing the aspirations of the majority of Rhodesia's people — whites and blacks, including those who belong to the guerrilla alliance, the Patriotic Front.

Moreover, it must do all this while waging a war that by most accounts is going badly and getting worse. "It's bound to," said P.K. Van der Byl, the dapper hard-liner who is the white co-minister of foreign affairs. "Those who don't think they can win an election are making their last big effort," he said.

The war is costing nearly $2 million a day and even the reported reintroduction of South African military forces in the southern border area is unlikely to provide much relief.

The military situation is exceedingly complicated. In some areas, there is apparently a virtual halt in fighting, in part at least because local commanders have been told not to seek contact with the guerrillas. In part, too, it seems that there are an increasing number of "local arrangements" between the army and guerrillas. The rebels are split into factions which are often as opposed to each other as to the Salisbury government.

It is universally agreed that a cease-fire is essential if this experiment in joint white-black government is to survive until the proposed elections for a black majority government sometime next fall.

The black leaders of the Executive Council, Bishop Abel Muzorewa, Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole and Chief Jeremiah Chirau, express confidence they can pull it off and tell of daily contacts with guerrillas now inside the country to arrange an end to the fighting. Outside observers, mindful of the military slippage, remain doubtful and await the outcome of the call for cease-fire to be convinced.

Just how the Executive Council can hold elections amid the present uncertainties is puzzling. If elections for the formal establishment of a black Zimbabwe government are to be accepted abroad, some means must be found to get the guerrillas out of the bush and to the ballot box. Yet their leaders, who have denounced the internal settlement, have scorned overtures to return.

Even if no progress is made with the guerrillas, Smith says he and his black colleagues are determined to go ahead with elections and says "any impartial, just observation" by outside observers is welcome.

Despite — or because of — economic sanctions, Rhodesia has one of the broadest-based economies in Africa. But the steady exodus of whites and their capital together with the war's drain on manpower and other uncertainties underlies the country's present-day economic crisis.

$68,199 To Crime Victims

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Workers' Compensation Board Wednesday announced $68,199 had been awarded to injured crime victims during March.

A 19-year-old man was awarded $18,775 for loss of wages incurred and permanent injuries suffered while he was attempting to make a citizen's arrest of the driver of a car the victim believed was stolen. The man suffered fractures to both legs, which resulted in permanent weakness to one leg, when he was crushed between two cars when the suspect drove away.

A 27-year-old Prince George woman was awarded $3,959 after she was attacked, beaten and thrown down a flight of stairs during a domestic dispute. She suffered a severe fracture to her right leg which required extensive rehabilitation.

Students Joining Forces

Student representatives from 19 of the 24 high schools in Greater Victoria will meet May 9 to decide on a community service project in which all can take part.

The meeting, which begins at 1 p.m. in the conference room of the Greater Victoria School Board office, will be fourth since an inter-school student council was formed earlier in the year.

Chairman of the council, Susanne Tabata, 18, a Grade 12 student of Lambrick Park secondary and president of the student body, says the community service project is seen as a way of breaking down rivalry between schools and generating a greater feeling of togetherness among all students.

Susanne says no project has been proposed, but the council is looking for something that all schools could participate in to the benefit of the public. An example might be a joint school-run blood donor clinic.

Major Bronco Recall

LIVONIA, Mich. (Reuter) — Ford Motor Co. said Friday it is recalling for inspection about 6,000 light trucks and four-wheel drive Bronco vehicles in Canada and export markets.

It also said it is recalling 61,000 similar vehicles in the United States.

The company said the recall will involve the 1977-78 F-series light trucks and 1978 Broncos with automatic transmissions and part-tame four-wheel drive for inspections.

It said that although the transmission selector lever indicates the park position, it may not engage due to a casting problem during the manufacture of the transmission extension housing.

Cost of the recall was not disclosed.

Ranch for Sale

Islam, Mysticism Clash in Java

JAKARTA (Reuter) — When Haji Munir returned from a mountain peak and told the people he had married the spirit of the legendary mystic Fatima, word of the faithful Moslem's endowment with magic powers spread like wildfire.

People from all over Lombok island, east of Java, hurried to meet Munir to be cured of ailments or protected against enemies using black magic.

Police investigated the case but found no evidence of fraud and allowed the Haji to continue his magic.

The case of Haji Munir's marriage to the spirit of Fatima, recently reported by Indonesia's national Antara news agency, contains in a nutshell most aspects of a deeply divisive issue in Indonesian society — mysticism versus formal religion, a struggle likely to cause some trouble at the current session of the People's Congress.

Moslem purists believe the government is trying to upgrade the status of ancient Javanese mystical beliefs and schools of thought in order to weaken Islam as a political force.

Like 85 per cent of this vast Archipelago's 135 million population, Haji Munir of Lombok professes Islam as his formal religion.

Having made the pilgrimage to the holy shrines of Islam in Mecca, he is even regarded as an outstandingly good Moslem.

But like millions of people, especially in Java, he is also an adherent of mysticism, practising ancient meditation rites dating back to animistic times long before the advent in this part of the world of Buddhism, Hinduism, Christianity and Islam.

Mystics say there is no inherent contradiction between formal religion and their ways towards a better understanding of God by striving to become one with the "life forces of nature."

Moslem purists argue, however, that the visible side of mysticism is often combined with magic rites performed by dukuns (wise men) or gurus (teachers) who are venerated by superstitious people.

KARPOV PUTS ON PRESSURE

Russian Grandmaster David Bronstein has had many ideas that tread the fine line between brilliance and absurdity. His Queen sacrifice for two pieces and two pawns against the Saemisch variation of the King's Indian is a good example. Most top players would hesitate before trying this strange line against a player so technically accomplished as World Champion Anatoly Karpov. Not so Drasko Velimirovich, Yugoslavia's answer to Mikhael Tal.

This 1976 game both dispels some myths about Karpov and confirms some truths. One key to his fantastic success is his subtle understanding of pressure. In the early middlegame, rather than waiting to exploit his extra pawn, the World's Champion sought active ways to pressure his opponent's position immediately.

Karpov is often regarded as great in technical and strategic skill but not so great when facing tactical complications. While it is true he does not invite these, he cannot be said to be weak in such positions. His notes to the following game in CHESS IN THE U.S.S.R. clearly show his complete grasp of tactical infighting. Here he spurns a perpetual check on the assumption that his active pieces and the disorganization of the Black army will provide him with a won game and a full point. Later, the deadly co-operation of Queen and Knight proves him right. (Black was played by D. Velimirovich.)

After Black's 14th move, the positions were:

WHITE: King on K2; Queen on KR4; Rooks on QR1 and KR1; Knights on QB3 and KN1; pawns on QR2, QN2, Q5, K4, KB3 and KR2 (12 pieces).

BLACK: King on KN1; Rooks on QR1 and KB1; Bishops on QB1 and KN2; Knights on QB5 and QN1; pawns on QR2, QN2, Q3, K4, KB2, KN3, QB2 and KR2 (15 pieces).

15.	R-B1	N-R3
16.	N-Q1??	N-N3
17.	N-R3	B-Q2
18.	N-K3	P-KB3

School Tax Up -Gov't Blamed

COQUITLAM (CP) — Coquitlam school district trustees have approved a mill rate increase of almost two mills from 1977 to pay for a 1978 budget of $47,540,014, compared with $43,527,086 last year.

Trustee Alan Birchard blamed the provincial government for the increase.

"Three years ago they were paying 75 per cent," he said Tuesday. "You look at the figures now and you find they're only paying close to 40 per cent of the budget."

The 1978 mill rate is 51.993.

Gov't Gives Details Of $700M Bond Sale

OTTAWA (CP) — The government will borrow $700 million through sale of Government of Canada bonds dated and delivered May 15, Finance Minister Jean Chretien announced Friday.

Funds raised through the issue will be used for general government spending and the Bank of Canada will purchase a minimum of $200 million of the bonds, he said in a news release.

Chretien first announced the bond sale two weeks ago but gave no details.

Friday's announcement came a day after Chretien revealed the government is borrowing 1.5 billion West German marks (about $775 million Canadian) and arranging a "large" U.S. dollar standby credit with U.S. and other foreign banks.

The government already had a $2.5-billion standby credit with Canadian banks and had borrowed $750 million U.S. through a bond sale in New York last month.

The foreign borrowings are to be added to the government's international reserves to be used, if necessary, to prevent a further run against Canadian dollar.

—8¾-per-cent bonds due June 1, 1981;

—8¾-per-cent bonds due May 15, 1983;

—9½-per-cent bonds due Oct. 1, 2001. There will be a maximum issue of $350 million in bonds of this maturity.

There's a knack to being ahead of the 'what-to-wear-next' game, and it has something to do with dressing like this. And since a lot of how you look now hinges on a blazer, why not start with the right one. Make it an unlined, unconstructed, no bulk Bagatelle blazer. The thing about these blazers — the way you see them here is only the beginning . . . only a couple out of a dozen ways you can wear them. Blazers with pants. Over string knit sweaters. Over vests. Oversize emphasized. And the tip to all this layering: push the sleeves up, turn the collar up, and turn the layers on. Bagatelle unlined blazers, they're more shirts than anything else. 'CHANCE TO CLEAR MY NAME'

Davis Welcomes Laying of Charges

A writ detailing charges of theft and fraud was served on former transport minister Jack Davis this morning after he had been kept hanging for nearly a month wondering where he stood with the law.

DAVIS

At a press conference Friday Davis said he was glad the charges were finally being laid. "This way I can really clear my name, clear it without any hint of favor, political or otherwise."

Davis says he will fight the charges and will remain in the House as an MLA during the court proceedings in Vancouver.

The charges carry a maximum penalty of 10 years in prison.

Davis is the second member of a B.C. government to be charged while in office. Robert Sommers, former Social Credit lands and forests minister, was found guilty in 1958 of accepting bribes and was sentenced to five years in prison.

Davis was dismissed from the Cabinet April 3 when Premier Bill Bennett told the legislature about the RCMP investigation into Davis' use of airline tickets.

Davis said the charge of theft over $200 and fraud, as earlier indicated, involves his practice of changing first-class airline tickets to economy. About $900 in refunds is involved.

The precise date for his first court appearance is not known, but it has to be within seven days of the issuing of the writ.

Davis, 61, said both he and his Vancouver lawyer, Allen McEachern, are convinced he will be cleared of the charges.

"My conscience is clear. I have done no wrong. I haven't short-changed anyone, least of all the government."

He said this will be proved in the courts.

Davis said there is no question of financial gain involved because he neither asked for, nor received, refunds for other expenses he could have charged to the government.

"On balance I never owed the government anything. It owed me money instead."

Davis made it clear the delay in getting the issue into the courts is wearying to him.

"My reputation is at stake. My long and honorable career of 25 years in the public service of Canada is being dragged in the mud. My family and my friends are distressed.

MOSCOW (AP) — The pilot and navigator of a downed South Korean jetliner left the Soviet Union today after the official news agency Tass said they admitted having disobeyed Russian pilots' orders to land when their Boeing 707 violated Soviet airspace.

A U.S. embassy spokesman confirmed that pilot Kim Chang-kyu and navigator Lee Kun-shik had departed from Leningrad aboard an Scandinavian Air Systems flight to Copenhagen via Stockholm.

Inflation Of 9% For U.S.?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Inflation in the U.S. could climb to more than nine per cent this year, the labor department said Friday.

The anouncement followed the publication of figures showing a 0.8 per cent increase in consumer prices during March.

Economic observers say the latest figures likely will provide new pressure for the government to step up its anti-inflation campaign.

Inflation already is running well above the six to seven per cent previously forecast for 1978.

Rex Granum, deputy White House press secretary, said the latest figures were disappointing, but reaffirmed the administration's belief that price increases would slow later in the year.

Steep price rises in the first two months prompted President Carter earlier this month to renew his anti-inflation campaign, with an appeal for voluntary co-operation from business and labor to hold down wage and price increases.

More Firms to Close Labor's Ryan Warns

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Closure of McDonald's bakery, which cost Victoria 62 jobs, may be only the start of a series of industry losses for the district, industrial commission chairman Larry Ryan said today.

"We have received reports that several more companies, operating as branch plants, may soon close here."

Ryan said companies are operating on what he called "the iron law of centralization," consolidating their manufacturing in a central location.

Closure of McDonald's to consolidate in a Langley bakery was an example of this, as was the loss of the Bapco paint plant and the Quadra Street winery.

The commission is checking on reports other companies are planning to close Victoria branches, he said.

Ryan, a city alderman and secretary of the Victoria Labor Council, said local unions must take a firm stand this year to protect workers in the event of further closures.

Severance pay clauses are not enough, he said.

Companies should be required to give adequate notice and should be made to justify their closure by opening their books.

"Closing a plant represents a serious loss to the city and it would be in the public interest to have the books opened to see if the closure is justified."

In addition, there must be clauses in contracts guaranteeing workers jobs elsewhere in the company in the event a plant is closed.

"We in the labor movement have been too trusting. Management tends to laugh it off, to say: How ridiculous can you get? We've been here for 25 years, we're not going to close . . . that sort of thing."

Now it is clear there must be more protection because more closures are likely as companies consolidate their activities, Ryan said.

Neither the industrial commission nor labor can help to save a plant unless there is advance notification of a planned closure, he added.

McGavins, which owns McDonald's, did not notify the industrial commission and gave only minimal notice to its employees, Ryan said.

"The first thing we (in the industrial commission) knew about the McDonald's closure was when we read about it in the newspaper."

Ryan said the industrial commission was working hard with other companies in an effort to head off any future closures but it might prove difficult because of the economic difficulties associated with branch plant operations.

Clocks Ahead Tonight

Daylight saving time arrives at 2 a.m. Sunday and at that time clocks in B.C. will be advanced by one hour. But it's far more practical to do this before bedding down for the night.

Pacific Standard Time returns to the province at 2 a.m. Oct. 29.

Once a controversial issue, daylight saving came to Victoria first in 1918, the final year of the First World War, in order to save electricity for war munitions.

INDIANS END BLOCKADE

CRANBROOK (CP) — The St. Mary's Indian band Friday ended its blockade of a CP Rail line which cuts through reserve land near here after the company agreed to discuss the Indians' complaints.

The band seeks damages from CP Rail because it says 80 to 90 acres of land have been lost through erosion.

Liquor Up On Monday

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Liquor Distribution Branch announced Friday that the price of beer and hard liquor in British Columbia is going up.

The branch said in a news release that the price of a case of beer will increase 19 cents May 1, while the price of hard liquor and imported beer will increase June 1.

The price to the consumer for draft beer will not change since the increase will amount to less than one cent a glass and will be absorbed with the move to smaller capacity metric glasses, the branch said.

Price increases of 30 to 40 cents a bottle on domestic spirits, five to 10 cents a bottle on imported spirits, excluding scotch, and 20 to 45 cents a case for imported beer, will take place June 1.

Liqueurs will cost 70 to 85 cents more a bottle.

The price of a bottle of scotch will increase as much as 75 cents June 1. The branch said five to 10 cents of the increase is government markup, while the rest is the result of higher prices from the suppliers.

The branch said there will be no price increases for wines and low alcohol beer, reflecting the government's policy of encouraging the consumption of lower alcohol products.

The new prices are the first government markup on liquor since July, 1975, the branch said. Any increases since that time have been the result of higher costs from suppliers, higher shipping costs, or have reflected changes in the value of currencies.

Door Closed To Save Life

VANCOUVER (CP) — A decision to close the door on a burning room containing three elderly women could have been avoided if politicians enforced tighter present-day fire safety systems on older buildings, Coroner Glen McDonald said Friday.

McDonald agreed with fire marshals who attended at the fire that rest home owner Anna Jaworsky was correct under the circumstances in shutting the door of the room where the fire started, leaving the three victims inside.

He made comments during the inquest into the deaths of Ann Craig Walker, 87; Neltje Monasch, 92, and Hilda Kate Hogarth, 84, who died as the result of an early-morning blaze April 7 in the White Gates rest home where they were residents.

Their deaths were ruled unnatural and accidental by the six- member jury who recommended that the rest home be required to upgrade its fire safety mechanisms.

Two heat sensors on the second floor, triggered to sound when temperatures reached 57 degrees celsius, were not set off by the blaze which was confined to a single 4.5-metre square bedroom on the main floor.

Inhalation of smoke and hot gases, plus burns, caused the deaths of Walker and Monasch who were dead on arrival at hospital. Hogarth died 11 hours later of smoke inhalation and burns.

Asked by McDonald what would have happened had the door been left open, Inspector J. W. Griswold said "there would have been a complete catastrophe," because the fire would have quickly spread, endangering 15 other elderly residents who escaped.

"Perhaps if we had some gutsy regulations from our politicians, Mrs. Jaworsky would not have been placed in the position of deciding whether to close the door," said McDonald.

"I would sincerely hope that the provincial fire marshal and city fire warden get together and say to victoria 'make some laws.' " McDonald said. "Life is really in the hands of the politicians, not the bureaucrats.

"Why the city fathers can't make a law retroactive (to encompass older buildings) in order to save lives, I don't know . . . we can't wait for another committee to be struck. Somebody has got to take charge."

The jury further recommended that the kind of restraining jackets worn by the elderly women to prevent them from falling out of their

OTTAWA (CP) — The trade surplus in goods hit $1.412 billion in the first three months of 1978, nearly double that of the same period a year ago, Statistics Canada reported Friday.

The substantial improvement came as a record $4.361 billion worth of goods was sold in March on a balance-of-payments basis, running up a surplus for the month of $840 million.

In the first three months of 1977, the trade surplus was $796 million. In the final quarter it was $1.154 billion.

Meanwhile, the finance department's economic review for 1977 says wage increases will have to be held down if industry is to benefit from recent gains in international competitiveness arising from devaluation of the dollar.

The 239-page review, released Friday, says that last year there was a substantial improvement in Canada's position compared with all its major trading partners.

"All the improvement, however, came from the depreciation of the Canadian dollar and appreciation of other major currencies vis-a-vis the U.S. dollar," the review says.

Victoria a Distant Second In Hotel Luxury

When it comes to luxurious hotel or motel accommodations in B.C. Victoria rates second only to Vancouver — but we're a long way from being a challenger.

According to the 1978 TourBook released recently by the Canadian Automobile Association no Victoria hotels, not even the Empress, managed to rate five diamonds, the highest award given out by the CAA.

Four Vancouver hotels got the five-diamond award, which were presented by Travel Minister Grace McCarthy last Friday, and 10 rated four diamonds.

Throughout the province seven other communities had one hotel apiece that got four diamonds, but none managed to achieve the top five-diamond award.

The TourBook explains that one or more diamonds indicate that the establishment meets or exceeds basic American Automobile Association and CAA requirements.

The hotels and motels are all personally inspected by trained association officials.

Merely getting a listing in the book is an accomplishment.

"For every establishment selected to be listed in the TourBook, four others were inspected and found to be lacking in some important consideration," explain the editors.

Four diamonds mean "Exceptional; significantly exceeds AAA/CAA requirements in most physical and operational categories. Offers luxurious accomodations, as well as extra amenities. The management and staff, the housekeeping and maintenance rank well above average."

Winning that rating in Victoria were The Empress, the Harbor Towers Motor Hotel, the Oak Bay Beach Hotel and the Chateau Victoria.

Five diamonds (signifying the establishment is renowned, with exceptional services and atmosphere went to: The Bayshore Inn, Four Seasons Hotel, Hotel Vancouver and the Hyatt Regency, all of which are in Vancouver.

Only twelve hotels across Canada managed to attain such high ratings.

The 10 four-diamond hotels in Vancouver are: Hotel Georgia; Holiday Inn-City Centre; 'The Inn' at Denman Place; Sheraton-Landmark Hotel; Sheraton Plaza 500 Hotel; Sheraton Villa Inn; Airport Hyatt House; Delta Hotels Vancouver Airport Inn; Richmond Flag Inn, and the Vernon Lodge Hotel.

In the rest of B.C. only seven communities had four-diamond establishments, including the Delta Hotels Discovery Inn, at Campbell River, and the Village Green Inn, at Duncan.

The Harrison Hotel, at Harrison Hot Springs, the Delta Hotels Canadian Inn (Kamloops), Capri Hotel (Kelowna), Delta's Inn of the North (Prince George) and the Crest Motor Hotel (Prince Rupert) were the others named.

Bill Updates RCMP Discipline

OTTAWA (CP) — RCMP discipline would be modernized and opened to outside scrutiny by a bill introduced in the Commons Friday by Solicitor-General Jean-Jacques Blais.

The bill to amend the Royal Canadian Mounted Police Act also would create a three-man external review committee to handle public grievances about treatment by the RCMP.

The committee would make recommendations to the RCMP commissioner on some grievances, serious discipline cases and orders for demotion and discharge, although the commissioner would retain the right to make the final decision in any case.

The bill incorporates the major recommendations of the 1976 Marin inquiry into RCMP discipline and handling of public complaints, which said the system of allowing the force to investigate public complaints against itself created an air of suspicion.

The government has given no indication whether this is a priority piece of legislation which it would want passed before calling a general election.

The proposed amendments answer many of the Marin commission's criticisms of the force's out-dated para-military system of discipline, under which a member of the force can be imprisoned for up to a year for committing a major service offence.

The new bill accepts the concept "that discipline should be remedial or corrective in nature rather than punitive," Blais said in a press release Friday.

The list of major service offences contained in the present act would be revoked and replaced by more modern standards of conduct. An RCMP member would no longer be subject to imprisonment on the orders of the commissioner.

Officers would have greater discretion in handling minor infractions of the standards of conduct. Officers would have the option of counselling members, recommending that they seek professional counselling or giving them a warning before taking more formal disciplinary action.

Many RCMP members who testified before the five-man Marin inquiry said the force's punishment-oriented discipline system sometimes worsens personal problems, such as alcoholism.

BOOKING TIME REDUCED

OTTAWA (CP) — The cut-off date to reserve a seat on a domestic advanced booking charter (ABC) flight until June 30 has been dropped to 30 days from 45 days before the flight date, the Canadian transport commission announced Friday.

The change was requested by airlines, which said they did not have enough time to market the new domestic ABC flights.

The 45-day booking requirement will be re-instituted July 1.

ABCs have been popular on trans-Atlantic flights for a number of years because of their low prices, but were banned on the domestic market until last December.

'REAL INDIAN NATION'

OTTAWA (CP) — Yukon Indians are proposing a land claim settlement in which an Indian government would have exclusive authority over all fish, game and forest resources in the territory, The Canadian Press learned Friday.

The Indian government, with its own parliament, also would have total control over services to Indians, including education, health, welfare, local government, justice, housing and taxation.

It would be separate from the Yukon territorial government and would have many of the powers that government now holds. Basically, it would be an Indian nation within Confederation.

The proposals are included in a claim's package being discussed at a Council for Yukon Indians (CYI) assembly in Whitehorse this week. The CYI, pending assembly approval, expects to present the package to the federal government next week.

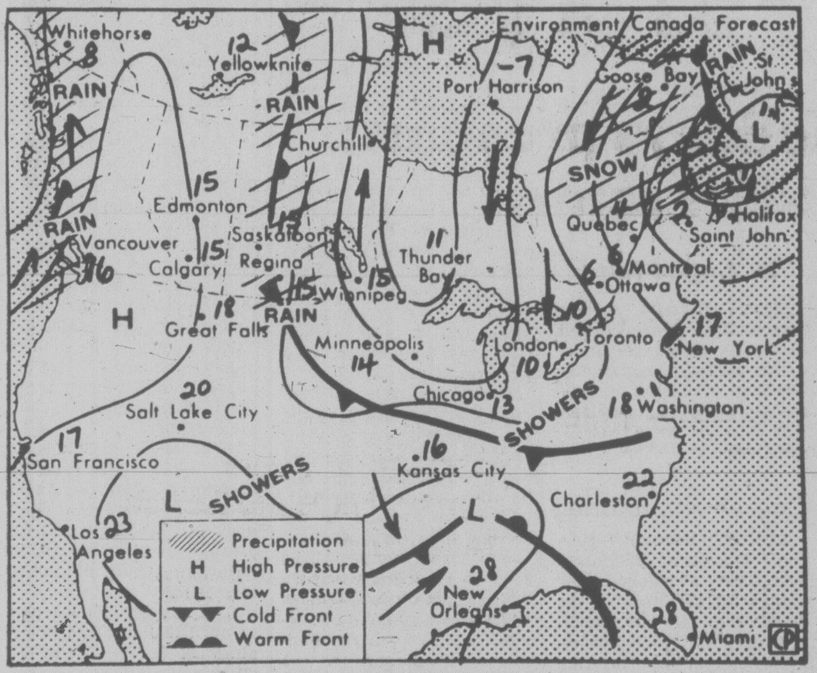

Map valid until noon Sunday

Although cloud covered much of the province overnight, sizeable breaks have started appearing across western B.C. as a ridge of high pressure along the coast continues edging inland. Further west a Pacific disturbance is approaching the Charlottes. This system will result in rain on the north coast today but weaken as it moves onto the south coast leaving most shower activity behind on the outer coast. Continued improvement is expected through the eastern interior as the ridge becomes established over southeastern B.C. by Sunday.

Canada Sets S. Africa Codes

OTTAWA (CP) — A code of conduct for Canadian companies operating in South Africa has been announced by the external affairs department.

The code urges businesses to pay black employees fair wages, assure them bargaining rights, to improve fringe benefits and, "to the fullest extent possible," integrate working, dining, recreational, educational and training facilities.

Companies are being asked to provide annual reports on what they are doing to comply. But the department has said nothing will happen if they don't obey the code.

External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson announced plans for the code during a Commons speech last December when he outlined economic measures the government was taking against South Africa. The code is designed to show the government is serious in its opposition to South Africa's racial policies.

The government is still studying other measures like ending Commonwealth tariff preferences for South African goods and lifting tax benefits for Canadian companies operating in the South African-administered territory of Namibia, also known as South-West Africa.

An external affairs spokesman said the government consulted about 20 companies, the Canadian Labor Congress (CLC) and an inter-church group called the Taskforce on Churches and Corporate Responsibility.

About half the companies had replied and the reaction to the code was generally favorable, he said.

Some observers have charged in recent years that some Canadian companies have permitted racially discriminatory practices.

The code said that the government believes Canadian firms will "make an important contribution" toward improved working conditions for black and other non-white workers in South Africa if these companies abide by the new guides.

The code recommends:

—The companies should ensure that fringe benefits are available equally to all workers. This should mean improvements for black workers in benefits like pension plans, vacations and disability insurance.

—Black trade unions should get customary bargaining rights even if these organizations are not considered registered trade unions under South African law.

—Blacks should get training so they can move more quickly into supervisory jobs.

—Working, dining and other facilities operated by these companies should be integrated as much as possible.

"The Canadian government intends to follow developments closely," the code said.

Islam, Mysticism Clash in Java

JAKARTA (Reuter) — When Haji Munir returned from a mountain peak and told the people he had married the spirit of the legendary mystic Fatima, word of the faithful Moslem's endowment with magic powers spread like wildfire.

People from all over Lombok island, east of Java, hurried to meet Munir to be cured of ailments or protected against enemies using black magic.

Police investigated the case but found no evidence of fraud and allowed the Haji to continue his magic.

The case of Haji Munir's marriage to the spirit of Fatima, recently reported by Indonesia's national Antara news agency, contains in a nutshell most aspects of a deeply divisive issue in Indonesian society — mysticism versus formal religion, a struggle likely to cause some trouble at the current session of the People's Congress.

Moslem purists believe the government is trying to upgrade the status of ancient Javanese mystical beliefs and schools of thought in order to weaken Islam as a political force.

Like 85 per cent of this vast Archipelago's 135 million population, Haji Munir of Lombok professes Islam as his formal religion.

Having made the pilgrimage to the holy shrines of Islam in Mecca, he is even regarded as an outstandingly good Moslem.

But like millions of people, especially in Java, he is also an adherent of mysticism, practising ancient meditation rites dating back to animistic times long before the advent in this part of the world of Buddhism, Hinduism, Christianity and Islam.

Mystics say there is no inherent contradiction between formal religion and their ways towards a better understanding of God by striving to become one with the "life forces of nature."

Moslem purists argue, however, that the visible side of mysticism is often combined with magic rites performed by dukuns (wise men) or gurus (teachers) who are venerated by superstitious people.
